MAYOR SEEKS SEWER BOND ISSUE

Sunday Beer Ban Beaten, City Looks to State

ASKS CONTROL BOARD TO AID IN 'CLEAN-UP'

Kyle Seeks Check of License Quota, Issuance of Permits in Church Zones.

FOLLOWS STORMY SESSION

Council Votes 5 to 3 Against Beer Ban After Ministers Warn of Local Option.

With the Sunday ban on the sale of 3.2 beer defeated by a 5 to 3 vote by council last night, the city today looked to the state for assistance in cleaning up the entire liquor dispensing set-up in Richland county.

Councilman George C. Kyle will take the problem directly to the state board of liquor control in Columbus.

Calls on State Board.

Kyle said he was preparing a letter today to the board in which he would ask it to look over the liquor situation, particularly the license quota and restrictions regarding the issuance of liquor licenses within church zones.

Kyle took the action following a stormy council session last night at which time he told representatives of the Richland County Ministerial association and council that it was "good business" for the city to appeal to the state.

"Why should this question come to council," Kyle asked. "Why should we take action on this request?

Says Its State Program.

"There are people both for and against the issue. Why should we stick our neck out. The whole thing should be referred to the state and let them settle it. It's their program and not one for us to decide on."

Kyle argued against the passage after Russell Porch, chairman of council's special committee urged support of the measure.

Porch was backed by a plea made by Rev. Grover Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church, who said he represented the ministerial association, which advocated a "bone dry" city on Sunday.

"Unless there is a cleanup along this line, the whole business is going to be out," Rev. Swoyer said. "It is in line with what other cities are doing and I feel that by asking for this action we are acting for the betterment of Mansfield."

He predicted that if council turned down the request that a local option election would result.

With council's Democratic majority reduced to four, equal to the Republican vote through the absence of Councilman Lester D. Hunter, a split in the Republican ranks brought about the 5 to 3 vote.

Those who voted for the ban were C. N. Shultz, James E. Crum and Porch, all Republicans. Votes against the measure were cast by Kyle, a Republican, and Arthur L. Croak, Harry Emmons, Fred Miller and George Berg, Democrats.

SAME OLD STUFF

It has been said "there's nothing new under the sun"—and we're inclined to believe it! Even workman's compensation was recognized during the Roman Empire. It was applied especially in the cases of workmen employed to train grape vines to climb trees. It seems this was a very hazardous occupation and frequently a man would fall to his death. In that event the employer agreed to such compensation as would provide a funeral pyre and grave. Someone will probably dig up information proving Social Security was originated by Napoleon — or the WPA was one of Caesar's projects!

DEATH FLAGS RACING DRIVER

'Wild Bill' Cummings, Speed King at Indianapolis, Dies of Crash Injuries.

(By International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS — William C. (Wild Bill) Cummings, 32-year-old Indianapolis race driver, who was injured Monday night in an automobile accident, died early today at Methodist hospital.

The popular young sportsman, winner of the Memorial day 500-mile race in 1934, died at 6 o'clock this morning.

Bill Cummings

Death came little more than 12 hours after surgeons had performed an operation to relieve a brain concussion which he had received in the accident.

Cummings never regained consciousness following the accident and his condition was so critical at the time of the operation that surgeons had held only slight hope for his recovery.

To race fans Cummings death was ironical because he had never been seriously injured in many years of competition at the Indianapolis motor speedway, despite the terrific speeds of more than 100 miles an hour in 500-mile races.

He was injured Monday night when his automobile crashed into the guard rail of a bridge near his home and plunged down a 20-foot embankment. The car turned over several times and came to rest in the creek.

SHILOH HIT

Cass Township Schools Closed by Cold Outbreak.

Beset by an outbreak of colds and grippe, the Shiloh schools, with an enrollment of 253 pupils, joined the Plymouth schools today in a forced vacation to ward off further spread of disease.

The Cass township board of education ordered the Shiloh schools closed after two teachers and dozens of pupils were stricken with grippe. The schools will be closed at least the rest of this week.

A stand-out county basketball game between Plymouth and Shiloh, scheduled for Plymouth Friday night, was cancelled.

The Plymouth schools were closed last week, re-opened Monday, and closed again yesterday when the epidemic of colds continued to spread.

BUNDLE UP, NEW COLD WAVE DUE

Zero Weather Hits Mid-West, Heads for Ohio, Though Spring's in Air Today.

While a zero wave hovered over the middle west and headed for Ohio, Mansfielders enjoyed spring-like weather today that sent the mercury up to 48 degrees at noon.

The weatherman immediately took the edge off the balmy weather by forecasting snow and near zero temperatures by tonight as a severe cold wave moved eastward from the northwest.

Mercury readings over the nation varied from 36 below in North Dakota to 82 above in Miami, Fla. In the plains states, sub-zero readings were recorded as far south as central Kansas, and Chicago prepared for 5 below by Thursday morning.

Temperatures fell as much as 50 degrees in a few hours in several western states as the severe cold settled over the northern half of the nation. Weather forecasters said the cold would be preceded by light snow and probably will remain for several days.

Scouts Promise 'Drastic Action' on Parking Puzzle

Mayor (For a Day) Sowash Says Meters Are Answer But Director 'Can't See 'em' as Scouts Reign.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Drastic action in "cleaning up" Mansfield's parking situation in one form or another, was assured today.

This was the word from both Mayor Richard Sowash and Service-Safety Director Robert Meese who were at loggerheads over the issue as the Boy Scout administration took over the reign of the city government today in observance of National Boy Scout week.

Both of these serious-minded youths talked freely but thoughtfully concerning Mansfield's traffic problem, but each had a different view on how it should be solved.

Same Old Issue.

The issue was that of parking meters. Mayor Sowash contended that they were the "answer" to the situation while Director Meese argued that he "couldn't see the idea" of the machines, which were an "unneeded" expense to the motorist.

Meese declared that the answer lay in the hands of the police department and that he intended to

EVERY 5 YEARS?

Plymouth Man Who Broke Leg in 1934 Does It Again.

(By Staff Correspondent)

WILLARD — Five years ago yesterday, Leroy Clinker, 23, of Plymouth, was admitted to the Municipal hospital with a fractured left leg.

Shortly after 11 o'clock last night, Clinker was again admitted to the hospital, with a fracture of the same leg. The Plymouth man suffered the broken leg — just two inches above the old break—and other injuries in an automobile accident near New Washington last night.

The same physician, Dr. J. C. Steiner of Willard, who set the first break five years ago, took care of the injured man again last night.

In the accident five years ago, Clinker suffered the fractured leg when he was caught in a buzz saw. Then it was also necessary to amputate his left arm which was mangled.

'Night Must Fall' Joins List of Players' Best Productions

By JANE WILLIAMS

It is a custom that has become almost a tradition, to offer nothing in the way of criticism and to heap only effusive praise on a home talent show or amateur talent, so that when a presentation like "Night Must Fall" comes along, the average spectator can only reiterate the praise he has given before—to the good and the mediocre alike.

But the few recalcitrants who insist on a truthful analysis and summation of amateur shows, even when it is unflattering, can drag out all of their best adjectives for an unusually good show without fear of being labeled an insincere gusher.

This "spectator" happened to have been one of the founders of the Community Players, present at that first meeting away back in 1925 at the home of Mrs. Clark Anderson when the plans were formulated, and has seen practically every production since then (with the exception of two years) from "Ice Bound" which was given in the American Legion assembly

FRANCO GIVES FRANCE PLEDGE

Assures Paris There Will Be No Foreign Domination in Spain After War.

PERPIGNAN, French-Spanish Border, Feb. 8.—(U.P.)—The citadel at Figueras blew up at 4 p. m. today. The citadel is an ancient fortress built under Ferdinand VI. The powder magazine under the citadel either was set off by the retreating Republican army or by the nationalist air bombs or artillery.

(By United Press)

PARIS—Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spanish Nationalist leader, has given France a sweeping pledge against foreign domination in Spain, it was understood today.

Senator Leon Berare, sent to Spain as a special envoy and destined to be ambassador to Spain if the Nationalists win the war, returned to Paris today and reported at once to Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet.

It was understood that he brought the following pledges, of the greatest international importance, from Generalissimo Franco:

1—All foreign troops will leave Spain as soon as the civil war is over.

2—There will be no foreign domination in Spain.

3—There will be no limitation of Spanish sovereignty in any agreements the Nationalists may make

BARGAIN DAYS

Retail Merchants Ready for February Sales Event.

Friday and Saturday of this week have been announced as the dates for one of the major merchandising events in each year—the February Community Bargain Days, sponsored by approximately 50 stores affiliated with the Retail Merchants' Association.

Community Bargain Days, launched in 1927 and held semi-annually, provide shoppers from Mansfield and surrounding towns an opportunity to economize by buying at sub-normal prizes.

Shoppers from out of the city will be given parking immunity on those two days if they display a coupon published today and tomorrow in the News-Journal on their windshield.

A special bargain days section will appear in Thursday's News-Journal.

Roosevelt In Bitter Fight On 4 Points

Roberts Case, Foreign Policy and WPA Funds Stir Resentment.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON— President Roosevelt attacked a rebellious congress today on fronts defended largely by conservative members of his own party.

1. He returned to the Works Progress administration fight with a request that congress immediately consider emergency appropriation of another $150,000,000 which house and senate only last month refused to provide.

2. He denied the version of Sen. Carter Class, D., Va., of events leading up to the nomination of Judge Floyd H. Roberts to the Federal bench and challenged constitutionality of the "senatorial courtesy" rule whereby the nomination was rejected. Mr. Roosevelt said he was inclined to think that Federal judgeships should not be included in senatorial patronage.

Hits House Members.

3. He denounced as deliberate misrepresentation the version of his foreign policy given the press by unnamed members of the house and senate and charged at least one legislator with deliberately lying.

4. He questioned the patriotism of the act of one or more additional senators—likewise unidentified who gave the press erroneous reports of sales of anti-aircraft equipment to Great Britain, thereby possibly revealing existence of secret American weapons.

The foreign policy dispute flared last week in international excitement over reports the president had said our national defense line lay on the Rhine or in France. He called the report a deliberate lie but was willing to close the book on that and related controversies if congress would.

But the issue comes up this week when the senate military affairs committee again considers motions to make public testimony relating to cooperation extended by the

TAX COLLECTION OPENS FEB. 20

Payments Delayed 2 Months by Re-appraisal; Mailing of Bills Begins Next Week.

Collection of Richland county's $1,500,000 real estate tax bill for the year will begin about Feb. 20, two months behind schedule, County Treasurer John E. Kolb said today.

Start of the first half collection, however, will depend on when Auditor Norman L. Wolfe completes work on the re-appraisal and tax figures, Kolb said.

If the books are ready this week, the collection will be opened by the 20th and will continue to April 1, Kolb asserted.

County property owners will receive statements for their taxes for the first time this year, and Kolb said mailing of 15,000 bills probably will start next week. The statement plan is provided for by a new state law, designed to boost the collection of real estate taxes.

The county's tax bill will be slightly higher this year due to a boost in real estate values to approximately $88,000,000, an increase of $4,000,000 over last year.

Helping to offset the valuation increase, however, will be a reduction in the tax rate in most subdivisions. Mansfield's rate dropped from 15.40 mills to 15 mills, but the county's general fund rate increased from 1.8 mills to 2 mills.

URGES FUNDS FOR REBUILDING MUNY SYSTEM

Says $50,000 to $100,000 Needed; Announces Plan After Survey's Halted.

FOLLOWS PLEA TO COUNCIL

Hunter Tells of Complaints, Says Workers Can't Combat Antiquated Conditions.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter today announced that he would seek a bond issue of from $50,000 to $100,000 to revamp the city's entire antiquated sewer system.

The announcement was made after the mayor learned that a sewer survey being conducted by a WPA draftsman had been suspended because of the lack of city funds.

Asks 'Immediate Action.'

It followed his plea to city council last night at which the mayor asked council for immediate action by providing funds through "some sort" of a tax levy.

Hunter addressed council on the subject after a number of petitions had been heard from State street residents concerning the backing up of the sanitary sewer into their cellars.

The mayor told the council he had been "swamped" with similar complaints in the past two weeks and that the sewer maintenance division had been working day and night to remedy the trouble but had met with little success because of the antiquated condition of the system.

"I'm sure Mansfield would back such a plea that hinged upon the preservation of the health and improvement of the community and I would like to see this question submitted to the voters at the earliest possible time," Hunter added.

The mayor said he would request City Engineer W. C. Statler to submit an estimate at the earliest possible moment on the cost of the comprehensive survey and the revamping program.

Calls for Estimate.

Warning council last night against a possible outbreak of disease from the present sewer system the mayor said, "it would be better to spend funds for the improvement of the system than to have to spend it to fight an epidemic."

Hunter declared that the condition of the system was "deplorable" and pointed out that the state department of health had twice refused to approve sewer extensions because it had repeatedly requested that the survey be conducted.

"I know the city's finances are not in proper shape but something must be done," the mayor asserted. "We have heard these appeals from property owners in all parts of the city so what are you going to do about it."

Meanwhile Owen Stroup, WPA draftsman who had been employed on the city records project to conduct the sewer survey and who has the preliminary work more than 50 per cent completed, was

'BUG' ON RADIOS

New O. S. R. Inmate Preferred Pen—and Broadcasts.

Claude Ramsey, 29, Columbus, a new inmate at the Ohio State Reformatory, was willing to spend an additional four years in prison for the luxury of a radio in his cell.

When sentenced today by Common Pleas Judge Charles A. Leach at Columbus to the reformatory, where he will be eligible for parole in two and a half years, he told the judge that he would prefer going to the Ohio Penitentiary as he understood prisoners could have radio sets with ear phones in their cells.

Radio sets are not permitted in cell blocks at the reformatory, Supt. Arthur L. Glattke said. Had Judge Leach listened to Ramsey's plea, the latter would not have been eligible for parole for six and a half years on the same sentence.

Ramsey was convicted on a robbery charge.

Solon Confounds Council By Charging Colleague's 'Dumb'

The almost unprecedented spectacle of one Mansfield councilman calling another one "dumb" provided the high spot of last night's council meeting. Both the name-caller and his target are Republicans.

It was Councilman Charles Shultz, mild-mannered veteran of the city council table who did the name calling. The colleague to whom he applied it was outspoken George C. Kyle.

What brought it all about was a monologue by Kyle on the advisability of a trial installation of parking meters, in which he suggested numerous objections.

"I'm wondering," Kyle said, "about the legality of the city to place a coin collecting machine in front of a man's place of business. I'm also wondering about that section of the measure that provides against the use of slugs in the meters. Who's going to stand over the meters and watch to see what sort of coins are placed in them.

"I'm also wondering—" Kyle went on, when he was interrupted

Happy Wife Writes Letter

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

In a column where correspondents are welcome to tell their troubles, air their grievances, ask advice about getting jobs, where to go for more education, how to step up the old job, what to wear, it's a positive joy to receive a letter like the following:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"As a daily reader of your column, I've been amazed to read letters from women married to sour curmudgeons who refuse to take their wives to an occasional movie and object to these poor souls going with other women.

"As a happy wife, I should like to say to these domestic dictators that marriage to a cowed, unhappy woman is a poor arrangement. If they treated their wives as partners and equals, instead of something on which to wipe their feet, their homes would be happier.

"I wasn't quite 18 when I married. My husband was 22. His was $16.50 a week, and as my family objected to our marriage, there wasn't a penny forthcoming from home. To us, however, marriage was a fifty-fifty proposition. As a file-clerk in an office, I made $13.50 a week, so our combined income was $30.

"My husband's parents were dead. His two brothers were rooming around and not very comfortable. They agreed to come with us, if we would take a house. We rented a house that was a good deal of a rattletrap. It's a wonder there was a decent heating plant.

"In the meantime, a friend of my husband's and his brothers' begged to be taken as a lodger. We agreed. All of us pitched in to help paint the house, and even papered the front room, which was a pretty terrible job.

"But we hung pictures over the bulgy spots. We bought some furniture on the installment plan, which we found too expensive. So we sat 'round auction rooms on Saturday afternoons and got some more.

"Then the young man who wasn't related to us had an aunt who was tired of paying storage, and she lent us some of her furniture.

"The boys were free to fry their bacon and make their coffee before they went to work, for which they paid something on the gas bill.

"For amusement we went to an occasional movie; all of us loved detective stories, which we'd get from the public library. We would read the first two or three chapters out loud, then guess the end. The winner got a prize or a treat. It was lots of fun.

"When the stork decided to favor my husband and me at the end of our second year of married life, we thought it best to give up our roomers, as my health was our chief concern. In the meantime, my husband's pay had been stepped up to $22.50 a week, and we had $104 in the bank.

"I gave up my job and sewed baby clothes. I found it the greatest happiness of my life.

"We aren't rich, but we have no debts and we're happy. One of the brothers-in-law married, and the other two boys wanted to come back to us and be uncles for Sonny, so we're all looking up a house. In our case, the brothers and friend of my husband were a factor in our small success. There are lots of homeless boys who would be only too glad to share a house with a friend and have a little bit of home atmosphere.

"I hope my letter will give some other young couple courage to take the great adventure.

SONNY'S MOTHER."

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"You see, I need your advice."

This was his next astonishing statement, almost petrifying to me.

I looked up at him with my astonishment showing in my eyes.

"I cannot imagine any subject in the world about which I could give you advice," I told him, "but I think you know that I would attempt any task in an endeavor to aid you."

He threw me a grateful glance, and his voice in answer held something very like huskiness.

"I do know it, my dear," he said. "You never have failed me yet, and I am sure you will not now, in probably the most delicate and embarrassing mission a man ever asked of a woman friend."

"It is a long story," he said, "and I confess I do not know exactly where to begin. But I need the advice of a rare woman, one who possesses a brain and intuition as well as a heart, and excepting Lillian Underwood you are the only woman I know who answers that description."

"I do not deserve such encomiums," I began, but he put up a protesting hand.

"Spare me any protests," he said. "I haven't time for them. And they are useless. You are the only woman I know who can help me in this dilemna, for Lillian is down there on the farm, and I am not supposed to call anyone there. They have made a regular fort of it."

He paused and looked off into space, while my fancy roamed far afield, wondering what possible service I could render him. But when his eyes finally came back and met mine, they were no longer undecided but clear and purposeful.

"In two days from now," he said, "could you drive down with me to the farm, arrange an interview with Queen Olga for me, and—be present at that interview?"

THEATERS

LOOK for a different Bobby Breen in his next picture, "Way Down South." The young star is to be Robert Taylored according to the commands of his producer, Sol Lesser. It has been felt for a long time that Bobby was a little too much on the sweet side to be a regular boy, besides being too affected. His sister, Sally, will be replaced as his manager by an older brother and he will be given a few rough edges to replace the dimples and curls. However, many observers believe that the trouble with Bobby is something more than curls and dimples as the attributes have not affected the popularity of staunch little Freddie Bartholomew. There has been considerable resentment among fellow workers who feel that young Breen is cocky and impudent to his elders on the lot. Anyway, his curls will be flattened and his face dirtied in "Way Down South."

Claudette as "Zaza."

After a stormy production, "Zaza," the stage shocker of 30 years ago, comes to the picture screen shorn of all the things that might sully American minds and morals, with Claudette Colbert in the role once graced by Mrs. Leslie Carter and Alla Nazimova. The Hollywood guardians of purity deleted much of the original plot, but old timers will recognize it. It is a story of the queen of Paris music halls and her lover. Herbert Marshall plays Dufresne, while Bert Lahr, Helen Westley, Constance Collier, Walter Catlett and Genevieve Tobin are in the cast. The double bill at the Madison for the last three days of the week also includes "The Lone Wolf Spy Hunt," with Warren William and Ida Lupino.

Runs Through Thursday.

Instead of running a full week "Idiot's Delight" will be carried through Thursday only at the Ohio as the Clark Gable-Norma Shearer film will give way on Friday to Blackstone's "Show of 1001 Wonders," which opens a two-day engagement. Because of the stage show, the usual Saturday opening will be postponed for a day. "Jesse James" will open at the Ohio on Sunday, probably running through the week. "Idiot's Delight" gives Gable one of his best roles.

In Favorite Role.

In the type of role that first brought him to picture fame, Chester Morris is seen in "Law of the Underworld" at the Park for the last half of the week. He is an ambitious mob leader who ruthlessly takes the lives of two young people into his whirlpool of broken laws. Richard Bond and Anne Shirley are the young people, while Walter Abel and Eduardo Ciannelli are supporting players. "Delinquent Parents" presents a modern problem play.

"Little Tough Guy."

When a man is involved in a labor riot, he is sent to the chair for murder, and his son and daughter are left to the mercies of a nagging lazy mother and the environment of a tenement district in "Little Tough Guy," at the Ritz. The Dead End Kids demonstrate—if it needs demonstrating—just how tough the present day urchin can be. Merle Oberon in a light, romantic comedy, "The Divorce of Lady X," provides a brighter note for the double bill.

Anita Louise Disagreeable?

The role of a disagreeable wife is a new one for lovely Anita Louise, but she is the "other woman" who comes between Henry Fonda and Bette Davis in "That Certain Woman." The fact that she marries him only adds to the tragedy. Ian Hunter is the fourth member of an unhappy quartet. A Dick Powell musical, with Priscilla and Rosemary Lane, "Varsity Show," balances the bill at the Majestic.

Spices Add Zip To Menus

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

We are happy to hear that so many women received for presents those delightful boxes containing herbs or spices. We hope that they will use them to give a zip, a zestful tang to their cooking. The continental cooks are past masters in the art of spicing their dishes. So let us, with the fine foods that we have at our command, add just that suggestion of flavor to make a good dish superlative. The good cook never lets one herb, spice or condiment predominate in flavor. The palate is just pleasantly aware of an extra richness, an extra flavor. Today we print some hints on the use of these adjuncts to fine cooking and we hope that the housewife won't regard spices or herbs as something exotic, but as regular kitchen company.

Beef stew takes on a banquet flavor when cooked with a small quantity of pickling spices. Boiled potatoes will make the dieter forget calories if the spuds are cooked in salted water with two bay leaves, then rolled in a mixture of melted butter and paprika. Clam chowder needs thyme, a bay leaf and caraway seeds as much as it needs clams. Boiled eggs are improved by the addition of celery salt and paprika.

Add Chili Powder.

Canned corn heats up to a fine tastiness with one-eighth teaspoon chili powder, salt, pepper and a lump of butter. Cole slaw becomes extra delicious when made with French dressing and the addition of celery seeds. Lamb, either roast or stewed, is improved by a teaspoon of dried majoram. Pot roast is always good but better with the addition of six ginger snaps dissolved in the gravy for thickening and flavor. Or, just rub a little ground ginger on the meat at the time you dredge it with flour.

Pound cake is more fragrant and more delicious when one-half teaspoon of mace is added to the dough. Tomato juice tastes like more when a pinch of powdered majoram is added. Scalloped eggplant with a suggestion of sage is excellent. To scallop, mix two cups stewed eggplant pulp, one-half cup tomato pulp, one tablespoon minced onion, salt, pepper, sage. Spread with buttered bread crumbs and bake until heated through.

Like It This Way.

Those who insist that they don't like spinach, won't eat it at any price, can be made to eat their words when they sniff the vegetable cooking this way. Use canned or fresh spinach. Drain off juice. Chop fine. Make a brown sauce by browning two level tablespoons flour in one tablespoon butter, then thinning out with one-quarter cup of the juice. Stir chopped spinach in sauce; season with salt, pepper, and a dash of nutmeg. When cooking succotash, add a few grains of nutmeg. Do right by sweet potatoes by mashing and blending them with cinnamon. Garnish with paprika.

When using whipped cream to top pies and puddings, whip in one-half teaspoon cinnamon and two teaspoons powdered sugar. Add a small stick of cinnamon while stewing prunes are simmering and several thin slices of lemon. Good for breakfast and for prune whip.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Feb. 8.

The planetary configurations for this day denote some rather conflicting situations. There should be a great deal in the way of social, domestic or affectional gratification, but at the same time there may be a sudden visitation that will prove disagreeable and upsetting to plans and desires. This disturbance might be due to a critical, captious and erratic state of mind. Wise counsel of an influential friend may be recommended to adjust difficulties.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very lively and eventful year. Although the private affairs—domestic, social and sentimental—may bring happy adventures, there also is a hint of a sudden upset or disturbance, that will interrupt the smooth running of a joyous state of afafirs. This might be due to a rather critical, eccentric or singular state of mind, and might be restored to peace and harmony by the advice of a faithful and influential friend or a trustworthy elder.

A child born on this day may be energetic, adventurous and ambitious, with unusual mentality and critical faculties. It should be kindly, sympathetic and affectionate, and have much cultural grace.

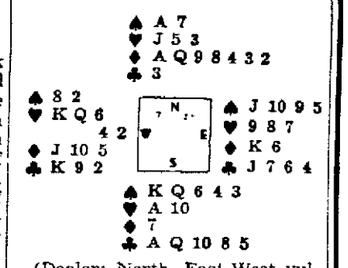
PLACE MISSING HONORS

If neither opponent has made any bid and one of them shows honors in a particular suit, it generally pays to count his partner for the high cards in other suits. The reason is that, if the outstanding honor strength were all in one hand, there probably would have been a bid from its holder. By making such a natural deduction, and selecting your finesse tactics accordingly, you will make many a contract which would be beaten if you disregarded it.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

Burr Wilson, former winner of the Westchester County championship, New York's leading suburban event, won a neat top score for his pair on this deal in a recent duplicate tournament of the Knickerbocker Whist club. The bidding was about as at most tables. North 1-Diamond, South 1-Spade, North 2-Diamonds, South 3-Clubs, North 3-Diamonds, South 4-Clubs and North 4-Spades. The same contract was reached at nearly all the tables.

Where the heart K was led to the A, most declarers then lost the diamond finesse, next a heart trick to the Q, and eventually two club tricks and a spade, going down two tricks. Mr. Wilson, however, made the contract. Noting from the lead that West held the heart honors that were out, he decided to place the others with East.

After winning with the heart A, he played to the diamond A and finessed the club 10 to the K. West took his heart Q, then led a trump to dummy's A. A heart ruff put South in to lead a club and ruff it, then a diamond was ruffed and the spade K cashed. Followed three clubs, the last of which East had to ruff, and the final trick was the spade Q, making the contract with the loss of one club, one heart and one ruffed club.

If Stout Dress With Care

By MME. QUI VIVE

If the woman with the feather bed shape hasn't the gumption to count the groceries she eats and rid herself of her excess flesh, she should at least make something of a study of clothes. Surely it is not necessary for her to accentuate her bumps and curves. Many of her type do it all the time.

Honest to goodness, girls, I believe some women love and admire their fat, like to make a spectacle of themselves and their adipose padding.

Black is your best color; it is slenderizing. Brocades, fabrics with large patterns, woolen frocks add to bulk. Short capes and short jackets take inches off the height. Keep to long flowing lines. Some of the best looking coats this season are straight up and down and fairly long.

Even more important than fabric is line. The cut of a frock is what gives it swish and style. If the figure isn't anything to brag about the smart dressmaker can at least create a neater appearance. She will of course insist upon a properly fitted corset which is a godsend to the woman who has spread beyond measurements that govern the laws of beauty.

The longer the sleeves, the longer the arms will seem to be. The V cut at the throat is kindly to the double chin and the uplifted bust. No necklaces, lady; they chop the short neck in two, and that's bad. Long earrings are a blessing to the pudgy face. Decorations of all kinds should be limited. The plainer and simpler the dress of the plumpies, the better they look.

If the torso is long the waistline should be lifted, if legs are long it should be lowered. The belt does a great deal to make proportions better or worse. It is an important detail of dress. The woman who is excessively overweight does better with no defined waistline.

But why not get down to brass tacks and battle the tonnage? Cut down on fats, sweets and starches, exercise daily and the trick is turned. Thousands have done it!

When frying don't put in the article to be fried until the fat is still and a faint smoke is seen rising from the pan.

Finish Work on Bill Revamping Ohio Tax Commission

ONE-MAN RULE OF COLLECTING TAXES PLANNED

Committee Also Working on Plan to Tighten Up on Sales Tax Collection.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Administration lieutenants in the Ohio senate put the finishing touches today on the draft of a bill to abolish the state tax commission and put one man in charge of the vast revenue-producing system.

A tax commissioner appointed by the governor for a four-year term, co-operating with a three-member board of appeals, would replace the present four-member commission under a bill to be introduced by Frank E. Whittemore, Republican floor leader in the senate.

Seeks Tighter Enforcement.

At the same time, the senate judiciary committee, seeking to increase the state's income from present revenue so that new taxes can be avoided, recommends for passage a bill to tighten enforcement of the sales tax.

The measure, estimated to increase collections by as much as $5,000,000 a year, would require the state treasurer to redeem cancelled sales tax stamps at three per cent of their face value.

A housewife who had collected cancelled stamps of $100 face value, thus could redeem them for $3 at a station set up by the tax commission.

As the senate awaited the tax commission "ripper" bill, the Republican leadership indicated it favored postponing indefinitely plans to revamp the two-member civil service commission.

Proposes Conferences.

Whittemore said he suggested further conferences with Gov. John W. Bricker.

"I don't feel that the necessity for reorganizing the civil service laws is as great as in some other departments," he explained.

While the tax commission reorganization bill would give the commissioner broad authority to administer the system, the proposed board of appeals could modify his rules, Whittemore said.

The commissioner's salary would be $7,500 a year. The board members would have terms of about six years and would be paid in the neighborhood of $5,000.

The number of deputy commissioners would be reduced from 15 to 5.

JAIL EX-CONVICT IN N. Y. MURDER

Police Say Slain Woman's Teeth Found In Suspect's Home.

NEW YORK —(AP)— A 29-year-old longshoreman and ex-convict was held today in the slaying of Charmaine Edwards, 47, recently on relief but once a concert pianist.

James Powers was booked on a homicide charge after police found the body of the woman, strangled and beaten, in a tenement hallway yesterday.

Detectives said that Powers admitted having an argument with her while they were drinking. They said two teeth knocked from the slain woman's mouth had been found in his apartment.

COURT REJECTS ELECTION FIGHT

State's High Tribunal Rules Out Congress Seat Scrap.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The Ohio supreme court today dismissed the petition of Emory F. Smith of Portsmouth, contesting the election last November of James C. Polk of Highland to represent the sixth Ohio congressional district.

The court held that the U. S. house of representatives is the sole judge of election and qualification of its members.

Smith, a Republican, contended that there were errors and irregularities in the casting, counting and certifying of votes in the November election, in which he was defeated by Polk, a Democratic incumbent.

BETTY IMPROVES

Actress Grable Collapses On Set, Undergoes Operation.

HOLLYWOOD —(U.P.)— Betty Grable, blond actress wife of Jockie Coogan, was reported in "very good condition" today after an emergency appendicitis operation.

She collapsed yesterday on a movie set where she appeared before the cameras with Comedian Jack Bnny. Coogan, at Brownwood, Texas, boarded an airplane for home when informed of the operation.

FORMER MAYOR DEAD

CANTON—(AP)—Funeral services will be held Friday for Harry Schilling, 66, only socialist mayor in Canton's history. He served six months in 1912 after a disputed election which a court ruled he lost.

Congress Opens Study of WPA Request

Up and Down THE STREET

What chance would a bandit have if he took it "on the lam" with a Mansfield police officer in pursuit with one of the two new high-powered rifles which the department received last week? The rifles have a range of more than two miles. When Chief Bates went out to the Gasco rifle range to practice and adjust the sites, he scored three bull's eyes out of 10 shots at 300 yards—the distance of two good city blocks. And all 10 shots at that distance entered a target 18 inches in diameter. All officers on the force will be given an opportunity to practice with the new rifles.

"Plus-fours" and knickers will replace slacks as proper golf attire this year, take it from Jock Collins, professional at the Westbrook Country club. At least it will be true in the case of professionals. Collins says that the "plus-fours" have been adopted to give the professionals a distinctive dress.

Richard and Wayne Taylor, 66 Parkwood boulevard, students at the Michigan Agricultural school, who recently returned from a tour of Mexico and the western part of the United States, have brought back with them several reels of colored motion pictures of their trip. Included in the pictures are shots of the Mexican army on parade, and a Mexican bull fight, showing the ceremonies preceding the fight and dragging of the bull from the arena.

When you feel like getting irritated at the Mansfielders who have lived here for years and still don't know the interesting points and facts about the town, consider the case of the Pittsburgh resident who stopped in a local bank this week to purchase traveler's checks. The cashier asked him which he preferred—those issued by the Railway Express or the Mellon bank. He said he guessed the former since he had never heard of the latter. And was he surprised to learn that the Mellon bank, one of the world's largest, was in his home town?

EXPECTED TO TAKE TIME ON FUND REQUEST

Leaders Uncertain of Reaction in House, Senate to Special Message of President.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's request for an extra $150,000,000 WPA appropriation brought congressional demands today for a careful scrutiny of relief needs.

Many legislators expressed willingness to vote for additional funds if the necessity was demonstrated, but there were indications that neither senate nor house would act quickly or without extensive inquiry.

The president's request was sent to Capitol Hill yesterday—three days after he had signed the $725,000,000 relief measure approved last week.

That bill carried $150,000,000 less than Mr. Roosevelt had requested to operate the WPA until June 30. It provided that not more than 150,000 of the present 3,000,000 WPA workers could be dismissed during February and March, and it authorized the president to ask a supplemental appropriation in event of an emergency.

Sees Drastic Reduction.

Utilizing the emergency provision, Mr. Roosevelt declared that unless further money is appropriated, WPA rolls would undergo "a very drastic reduction" April 1.

After that date, he said, at least 1,500,000 workers would have to be dismissed. He declared that almost 2,000,000 would have to be taken from the rolls if proper WPA reserves were to be maintained.

Rep. Woodrum (D., Va.), who had charge of the last relief measure, said he did not know what action the house appropriations committee would take "or whether it will take any." He said he had not changed his opinion that $725,000,000 was sufficient to keep WPA going until June 30.

In the senate, several members expressed surprise that Mr. Roosevelt had asked for further funds so quickly.

Senator Byrnes (D., S. C.), who helped cut Mr. Roosevelt's previous request, recalled that the measure provides for an investigation of relief rolls with a view to eliminating workers who are not in actual need.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Roosevelt Has No Kick On the Publicity Given His Defense Conference

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Our president stepped on a rake last week, and the handle hopped up and hit him in the eye. He then blamed the press for leaving the rake lying around. But, hell, paw, you done left that rake there your own se'f.

It was Mr. Roosevelt who called the military affairs committee of the senate for a conference on national defense and who said whatever he did say. As to whether he attempted to impose secrecy on the meeting, it is plain that, at best, he balled up the understanding, because some senators understood that they were so pledged.

The president later denied there had been a blanket pledge, but Senator Nye, for one, said he considered himself bound to silence. The fact is that some senators obviously fudged a little around the edges, giving Washington reporters information which rattled the windows at home and abroad, involving a question of confidence between those senators and the president. There is no such question as to the press.

It is an uncertain way of obtaining information, but not unethical. If a senator, with a full sense of responsibility, wants to tell reporters, in general terms, what went on at such a meeting, the problem of propriety is his own. He may figure that his duty and the public interest outweigh a question of propriety. Call it a question of honor, if you like, and the case is still the same.

A reporter who receives information under the seal of confidence has no such option. He is muzzled regardless of his own notions of the public interest. He may feel that he has made a mistake in accepting the confidence, believing he would have been able to come by the same information elsewhere without restrictions. But still he must play ball.

Some reporters, however, refuse to accept confidences, and I have a distinct mental picture of Mike Haggerty of the New York Times on a couple of occasions when persons offered confidential information to groups of reporters, holding up his hand and saying, "Count me out. I am a newspaper reporter and not a confidant."

In saying that guesses were dressed up as statements of fact and criticizing some newspaper owners for that, the president lays a general charge of fakery against all the reporters on that story. He also smears the whole press by neglecting to specify what papers he means. He gives no evidence beyond his own arbitrary interpretation of a controversy to which he is a party.

If some senators did understand that parts of the discussion were privileged, while others thought it was all confidential, then there was no valid confidence at all, for in that case each man was to let his conscience and discretion be his guide. It would be enlightening to know whether the senators were allowed to or did take notes during the discussion.

Reporters long ago overcame a tradition that it was amateurish or bush league to take notes on the ground that the sight of pencil and paper would tend to frighten the subject and make him choke up.

In London, in my time, some British officials refused to permit notes to be taken. That was their way out in case they overspoke themselves. They could say they had been misquoted. So the reporters trained themselves to concentrate and remember the exact phraseology of the answers.

On leaving the room, they would huddle somewhere and make notes, reconstructing the story almost exactly.

The senators in this case appear to have given inexact or free interpretations of the discussion, but, however that maye be and regardless of the degree of confidence or violations by the senators, the press is not involved unless senators are to be classed as unreliable informants.

What reporter dressed up what guess as fact? If President Roosevelt would answer that question specifically we would have a good test case and a showdown on whether the press is at fault or merely taking the fall for an error by Mr. Roosevelt.

U. S. CONSIDERS UTILITY'S PLAN

Columbia Gas Submits Program to Simplify Financial, Geographic Structure.

A plan of the $725,000,000 Columbia Gas and Electric corporation for simplifying its structure under the holding company act was before the securities commission in Washington today. Columbia is the holding company of Ohio Fuel Gas company, which serves Mansfield.

The law requires holding companies to simplify themselves financially and geographically.

The company's subsidiaries operate in Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky and the District of Columbia.

The plan filed with the commission, according to the Associated Press, proposed the following changes in the company's system:

Atlantic Seaboard corporation, the only subsidiary of Columbia which is a holding company, will sell the stocks and bonds which it owns of Amere Cas Utilities company, Virginia Gas Distribution corporation, and Virginia Gas Transmission corporation, to Columbia Gas and Electric corporation.

These three companies will thus become 100 per cent-owned, direct subsidiaries of Columbia Gas and Electric and Atlantic Seaboard corporation will cease to be a holding company.

The following subsidiary companies of Columbia Gas and Electric will cease to control any other companies:

United Fuel Gas company, the Manufacturers Light and Heat company, Fayette County Gas company and the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway company.

EXPERTS COMING

Westinghouse Kitchen Clinic to Open Tuesday.

Kitchen planning experts from national publications all over the country will come to Mansfield next week to attend the fifth annual kitchen clinic of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

The sessions will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Westinghouse Institute in the East Fourth street plant, with I. W. Clark, manager of the home planning department, in charge of the clinic and social activities planned for the visitors.

Those from the middle-western cities — Davenport, Chicago and Minneapolis—will arrive Monday evening, while those from New York and other eastern cities are expected early Tuesday morning.

An informal breakfast at the Leland hotel Tuesday morning will preceed the first clinic session. The annual formal dinner party will be held at the Leland ballroom Tuesday night, and there will be a tea for visitors Wednesday afternoon at the Westinghouse Institute rooms, with Mrs. Julia Kiene, director of home economics, as hostess.

MRS. ENCK, 56, DIES IN ASHLAND

Native of City Had Been Ill Several Years; Rites Thursday.

ASHLAND — Mrs. Mary B. Enck, 56, died at her home here Tuesday afternoon. A native of Ashland, she had been in ill health for the past several years. She was a member of the Church of Christ.

SUBMITS 7-POINT PROGRAM TO REVISE UTILITY LAWS IN OHIO

(By Associated Press)

OBERLIN—Prof. Ben W. Lewis of Oberlin college appealed to Gov. John W. Bricker today to redefine the purposes of utility regulation in Ohio. He also demanded a revision of existing public utility statutes and a "changed emphasis" in the administrative policies of the state public utilities commission.

A widely-known economist and former member of the NRA advisory board, Lewis voiced his proposals in a prepared chapel address. He suggested a seven-point program in revising public utility statutes which would include:

1. A provision that the "fair value" on which utility investors are permitted to receive a fair return be measured hereafter by the actual prudent investment in the property instead of the cost of reproduction

2. A provision that the state utility commission's accounting systems be revised and that major utility expenditures be supervised by the commission;

3. A requirement that the commission adopt an annual depreciation policy consistent with its policy governing depreciation reserves;

4. A provision for emergency ratemaking;

5. A provision for more adequate public representation in rate controversies involving small communities and to take care automatically of municipal rate case expenses through a charge to the operating expenses or surpluses of the utilities involved.

6. Establishment of a bureau of rate research within the commission's organization.

7. A provision to define more broadly than at present the responsibility of the commission's to make changes both in the level of rates and in rate schedules, on its own motion.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Seeing Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew together, working in "The Spirit of Culver," reminds of the curious intertwining of their two careers.

Freddie was "coming along" as Jackie was "passing out." They met and parted in "The Devil Is a Sissy." It looked like just another boost for Freddie, a farewell appearance for Jackie, who was looking less and less like that child Skippie, more and more like a varsity center. And at the time, nobody thought that movie trends would work to rescue not only Jackie—but sprouting Freddie as well—from oblivion.

Boys and girls in their teens used to pass from the screen as the awkward age claimed them. Wesley Barry. Ben Alexander, Peggy Montgomery and other silent screen moppets all disappeared, as stars when old age crept up.

But Messrs. Jackie and Freddie, and a host of others, were rescued from oblivion's dragon by the good St. George of Social Consciousness, aided indirectly by Deanna Durbin and Judy Garland. With those two girls, it was voice and youthful appeal that did the trick. With Cooper, and indirectly with Bartholomew, it was the spotlight focused on youth problems: since Cooper played in "Boy of the Streets" he has been in such demand that last year he earned probably $100,000, and is signed for six major features for the coming year.

Bartholomew's earnings have been nearly as great, under steady contract to Metro. There he has played more in light juvenile stuff—such as the upcoming "Babes in Arms"—but the "youth problems" angle unites him with Cooper in "Spirit of Culver," another saga of the Indiana military academy.

Of the two, Cooper will leave pictures by far the richer. He hasn't been the victim of family wrangling over his earnings, which may be ended happily for Freddie by the recent supreme court decision.

In the same picture is Henry Hull, one of the stage's great character stars, and due to be one of the screen's also if Hollywood sees the light after "Jesse James." Hull has played everything from bearded Southern colonels to horror men on the screen, only occasionally has had a role worthy of him.

Seeing him work with young Jackie Cooper was a lesson in the importance of acting to screen success. Not that Jackie's a bad actor, but that Hull is so much better—and how close to $100,000 do you think Hull's earnings were last year?

There is something amusing in the way Warner Bros. never forgets.

Once Kay Francis was their most ballyhooed star. From the billboards on "King of the Underworld" you wouldn't know she was in it.

Once Dick Foran was their big western star. He's no longer there. For a street scene in "The Roaring Road" they use Foran posters in the lobby of the village theater—but they paint out Foran's name and substitute a fictitious one.

In their "Heart of the North"—billboards and local theater lobby—they gave billing neither to Foran nor to other cast members. (But maybe that was kindness!)

Invades Ashland Tonight

Mansfield High Cagers Seek Second Win of Season Over Neighboring Rival.

MR. RUSS MURPHY'S Tygers will be afforded an opportunity to extend their victory edge on their season records tonight when they invade Ashland to complete a home-and-home series.

If Mansfield high school cagers take the A's into camp, the Tyger's record will show seven victories as against five defeats.

Win'll Extend Edge.

Such an occurance would give the Men of Murphy their best record of the campaign. A defeat, of course, will drop the Tygers to a .500 percentage for the season.

There is no assurance that the Mansfielders will triumph tonight, but they will go into the fray the favorites on the strength of their 35 to 18 victory over the A's in their first meeting.

However, Ashland will be bolstered for tonight's tussle by the return of Phil Smith, who suffered a dislocated shoulder when he fell after a jump ball in the first Mansfield game.

Smith has not regained the stride he set in scoring prior to the Mansfield game early in January, but Vince Barr has taken up some of the slack.

Probable Lineup.

Coach Murphy will again depend on his usual starting lineup consisting of Tommy Scott and Jack Dugger, forwards; Dave Shelley, center, and Jake Lyons and Bill Herpich, guards.

Don Rose, who is developing rapidly, will share a guard post with Herpich.

It was also learned today that Ike Smith, veteran guard, may be available tonight. He has been out of uniform because of ineligibility.

Union Upsets Butler

Indians' Late Drive Wins; Ontario Holds Position by Halting Bellville.

G. B.—Games behind leader.

CAGE representatives of Butler and Lucas high schools retain mathematical chances to overtake the front-running Madison Rams in the current Richland county league race.

But Butler's championship stock took a drastic drop on the home court last night when it was upset by a determined band of Indians from Union by a 36 to 31 count.

The defeat dropped the Bulldogs two games behind Madison, which has only two more games to play. A victory for the Rams over Lucas Friday night will cinch a tie for the crown and another win Saturday at the expense of Bellville will settle the race.

While admitting Butler was somewhat off form last night, Coach Hunter's Indians cannot be denied credit for the triumph. They played spectacular basketball, the same as they did on their own court a couple of weeks ago when they bowed to Butler, 38 to 35.

The first half favored the Bulldogs, but the visitors staged a scoring spree in the third period that sewed up the decision. Union trailed 15 to 12 at the half, and outscored the Bulldogs, 15 to 5, in the third quarter to take a lead that enabled it to win.

Butler attempted a late victory drive in the final quarter, but it was unable to seriously endanger the lead obtained by the Indians in the previous frame.

Howard Tolles held the scoring spotlight as he led Union out of a tie for sixth place with Bellville, scoring 14 points. Butler's high scoring forwards, Kenny Miller and Wendall Ward were held to eight and five points, respectively.

The defeat was the third of the county league season for Butler, which, incidentally, has suffered all of its setbacks on its home court. Madison and Ontario administered the other defeats by one-point margins.

In the preliminary tussle, Butler took the measure of the Union reserves 322 to 19.

Bluejays Hit 14 Out Of 19 Foul Shots.

ONTARIO high school hoopsters protected fifth place in the county league last night when they administered a 33 to 26 whipping to Bellville on the Warriors' hardwood.

The defending champion Warriors never trailed after obtaining an 8 to 6 advantage in the opening period. They extended their lead to 18 to 10 at the half.

Bellville outplayed the Ontarioans in the second half, but was unable to reduce the Warriors' first half intermission margin to any appreciable extent.

The Bluejays climbed within three points of Ontario near the end of the third inning, but Coach Orv Kibler's courtiers pulled away in rapid order in the fourth frame.

Ontario limited Mentor Boyd Hodge's plank pounders to only six field goals, but the Bluejays remained in the ball game because of their marksmanship at the foul line.

They converted 14 out of 19 throws from the black stripe for one of the best foul shooting percentages of the league season.

Although 30 personals were called by Referee Tony Grant, the game was a cleanly played affair. Fouling was the result of hard playing rather than roughness.

Henry Hager and his older brother, Mats, led the Ontario scoring with 11 and seven points. Bill Martin tallied nine for Bellville. Ontario took the preliminary tilt by a 19 to 12 score.

CHAPTER XX

"The law divorced us but I've never felt unmarried to you, Bernice," Don said. Still he would not touch her. "There are so many things I have to explain . ." He smiled then. "So Alix called you. That's her answer. I asked her yesterday, since neither of us could have what we wanted, why we didn't form a partnership. She said she would tell me today at 3. But you . . . you're my answer, Bernice. You're the answer I wanted more than I ever wanted Alix who is even older than my own daughter. You and Nancy made a mistake about her. I never asked her to marry me until yesterday."

"Then we've been wrong about her, Don! And now . . ."

"I've been wrong, too. I've been wrong for years."

"I left you when you needed me. I should have stayed. Alix told me to forget pride and humiliation. I have." Her voice stopped abruptly. "Don . . ." She held out her hands and he took them. "Darling, we've come home!"

"No one punished me. I punished myself." He drew her close and smiled. "I may not be a better husband this time . . ."

"But better or worse, my husband. Six years we've missed . . ."

"We'll make them up. Every lost minute we'll make up."

When they look around, Alix, looking like an uninvited child, stood there.

"I had to know," she said simply. "I had to know before I had the chauffeur take me back. I had to know if . . ."

Bernice went to her.

Alix said, "Don't apologize. You didn't know. I didn't know until yesterday. I'm glad it's all over."

"But it isn't darling."

"It is—for me. And it's better this way. From the very beginning I've been an intruder among people I have no right to associate with, people above me socially." She looked at Don. "Thank you for offering me my job back but I can't accept." To Bernice she said, "It is a lovely house. It's your house. I could never have been happy here."

"Alix, my dear. . . ."

"No. This is good-bye. Good luck to both of you and to Nancy."

She hurried out to the car. Turning once, she saw Don and Bernice still on the terrace looking after her anxiously.

"We should go and get her and bring her back," Bernice said. "We can't let her get away from us. She has no job and probably no money."

"Tomorrow we'll go after her."

She nodded and smiled at him. "And after you've taken me through my house, we'll go back to Nancy and . . ." and laughed. I don't know his name yet but he's going to be our son."

* * *

When Eddie telephoned that night, Alix told him briefly what had happened.

"What are you going to do now?" he asked.

"I'm going to begin again," she said, knowing that there would never be a new beginning for her regardless of where she was while there was no news of Tod and while Kurt was still in her heart.

The next night when Alix came in after midnight after having seen Eddie off to Chicago on his vacation, she found Nancy's brief note under her door. "I'm sending a car in for you tomorrow morning at 10," Alix read and wondered if she should accept the invitation.

The room was hot and a storm brooded. Her white dress was wrinkled from having spent the entire day downtown. She had registered at several employment agencies, had dinner with Eddie, gone to a picture with him, and left him at the station.

With a gesture of weariness she pushed her damp hair back from her forehead and read the note again. "They want to thank me," she thought. "Nancy wants to tell me she's sorry." She hated to have them see her shabbier than she had been in four years and it would take more strength and courage than she had to pretend that she was happy and satisfied. Not for years had she felt so discouraged. Her life had come to a fork in the road, she thought, and every way she looked it was dreary and uncertain.

When the storm broke, it scattered coolness. Deciding to accept Nancy's invitation, she polished her white shoes, washed her white gloves, and pressed the white linen dress with the large blue buttons.

Omitting breakfast had become habitual. At 10 o'clock she was in the Lawrence car looking out at the countryside, thinking that the past days had been the darkest days of her life. Love had passed when Kurt married Gina.

As the car turned from the highway and the cottage in the grove of pines came in sight, she thought, "This is my fight. It's a fight for existence and a fight to stop loving a man married to another woman. I've got to see it through alone. I'm not going to lean on any one or accept favors. The Lawrences will feel very sorry for me. They think they owe me a lot."

Bernice and Don met her. Bernice kissed her and led the way to a table under the large shady tree, a table set for five for luncheon. Five?

"We went into town last night to see you but you weren't home," Bernice said.

"Eddie drove me down to see Tuck last night." It was so peaceful here she felt she would like to lie down in the soft bed of grass and sleep and sleep. . . . .

Don spoke in mock severity. "You walked out on us yesterday, young lady, but you're not going to walk out on us again. An intruder! What nonsense."

Bernice stood over Don with her arm around him.

"You gave me back my husband, darling. You must let us do something for you."

Alix bit back the tears. "I don't need your help. I'm—I'm fine. Really I am."

Don said, "Perhaps you'll change your mind when you see Nancy. You'll find her in the house. She's waiting for you. Go in and see her, Alix. She's anxious."

Conscious of some secret delight in their faces, she left them and went into the house. But on the threshold of the living room she stood, rooted, seeing Tod! Tod! But an utterly changed Tod, handsome in white linen, smiling at her with secret delight, too! She could not speak for trying to understand why he was here, why he looked so splendid, why. . . . Perhaps it wasn't he at all!

His gesture made tears spring in her eyes because for the first time in years he came to her and put his arms around her. She was conscious that he too was trembling and trying hard not to show how he felt.

"Oh, Alix! Sure, it's me." His voice shook. Holding her, he realized how thin she was. "Don't. . . ."

She held him off and looked at him, trying to believe . . . "I'm all right. Oh, let me look at you, Tod!" Trying to laugh a little, she said. "Oh, it doesn't make sense! How . . . why . . ." And all the time she was trying desperately hard not to cry.

"You'd better sit down, Alix. You're shaking."

When he told her everything, he met her astonished eyes, and added. "I'm ashamed. But I'd hit rock bottom, I thought, and I couldn't get out. I hated myself and everybody. But not you. I never hated you. You were swell to me. You've always been. You never let me down and I gave you nothing but trouble. I was twisted, but lying upstairs I had time to think about a lot of things you had told me and the things dad used to say. Oh, I thought it was all a lot of stuff. I don't know. I'm back on my feet, life looks great to me, and . . ."

She nodded her head slowly. "And you and Nancy . . . ."

He grinned. "You can't run out on the Lawrences now. They're going to be your family and mine. I hope I can live up to what they have planned for me. I've got to and I will." At the door he saw Nancy, her brown hair held back by a blue ribbon. "Nancy, will you finish this story?"

Alix arose as Nancy came forward and asked, "Alix, will you forgive me? I had such a terrible mistake."

"I've never been angry. I knew it was a misunderstanding but I didn't quite know how to get it straightened out." She looked at Tod. "Tod's looking like this straightens out everything for me, Nancy And Bernice and Don out there—together again. Tell me more about it. Tell me everything."

O-B REPORTS SHARP DROP IN '38 OPERATIONS

Statement Shows Net Profit of $15,629 as Compared With $1,159,842 in 1937.

"Prevailing business conditions" caused a sharp drop in Ohio Brass company operations during 1938, the annual statement of the company, released yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of directors, showed.

The company's net operating profit for the year was placed at $15,629, after allowing $241,377 for depreciation. In 1937, the net operating profit was $1,159,842, with an allowance of $248,377 for depreciation.

The company paid a dividend during the year of 25 cent per share of common as compared to payments of $3 per share for the preceding year.

The statement showed $112,512 invested in new machinery and equipment during 1938, as compared to $234,767 expended for the same purpose in 1937.

Resources Unimpaired.

The statement, issued by C. K. King, president, said that while prevailing business conditions had prevented the company from enjoying a profitable year, its resources had not been impaired, and that the company would continue its policy of active engineering, sales and advertising campaigns.

Company officials also stated after the meeting, held at the company offices here, that better business was anticipated in 1939.

Officers of the company, headed by King, were re-elected yesterday. They are Harry S. Black, senior vice president; George L. Draffan, executive vice president; Louis W. Olson, vice president and William A. Springer, secretary-treasurer. J. Martin Strickler, vice president in charge of sales; Frederic Attowood, vice president in charge of eastern territory, Merrill W. Manz, general factory manager and Kenneth V. Farmer, manager of Canadian Ohio Brass company, Ltd.

As is the company's custom, the annual stockholders' meeting was held Monday, in Jersey City, N. J., at which present directors of the company were also re-elected. They are, in addition to the officers, Arthur O. Austin, Donald S. Black, Robert B. Black, Roger A. Black, Nathan M. Garland, Walter T. Jameson, George A. Mead, William M. Weldon, Sr., and Arthur L. Wilkinson.

TRADERS WATCH EXCHANGE FOR SPRING TRENDS

Small Gains Rule as Market Attempts to Extend Recent Advance.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Small gains were the best the stock market could achieve today in an effort to extend the recent advance.

Steels made a rather brisk start, including Bethlehem, U. S. Steel and Youngstown.

General Motors moved up fractionally as most analysts found its preliminary 1938 profit figures, showing $2.17 earned per share on the common, more favorable than they had expected.

Bonds and leading commodities remained in a narrow price zone.

Waiting for hits on the spring business trend, Wall Street noted the "Iron Age" forecast that the general trend of steel probably would be moderately upward in February and March, despite indications orders had been levelling off.

An increase of about 5 p cent in January retail trade compared with the 1938 month was indicated in reports of 15 mail order and chain store systems, trade analysts found.

VESSEL SINKS, CREW RESCUED

American Freighter Saves Seamen After Ships Crash.

LONDON—(AP)—Lloyd's reported today that the American freighter Meanticut has rescued the crew of the Greek freighter Katina Bulgaris, which sank after the two vessels collided in a fog along the east coast of Britain.

Before the rescue was completed, a message from the Meanticut, 6,061-ton freighter of Houston, Tex., bound from New Orleans to Hull, England, said "one boatload from the Katina Bulgaris coming aboard," indicating the American vessel was not in danger.

MURDER SOLVED?

Convict Says Suicide Weinberg Killed Dutch Schultz Aide.

ALBANY—(UP)—The New York state police have obtained an affidavit from a federal prisoner alleging that the late George Weinberg star witness in the lottery trial of Tammany Leader James J. Hines, killed racketeer Jules Martin, an associate of the slain Dutch Schultz.

Martin's body, bound in a potato sack, was found in a snowbank four years ago on a highway near Troy, N. Y., approximately 10 miles from the state capitol. He had been shot once and numerous stab wounds indicated that he had been tortured.

Weinberg committed suicide January 29 at White Plains.

Promise Action on Parking Puzzle But 'Officials' Disagree on Meters.

institute a "rigid enforcement program."

"What we need is a couple of motorcycles on the streets to carry out the program now in force," Meese said. "You have seen the results obtained in the past week by such a program. We don't need the meters."

He explained that he had under consideration a plan whereby the city would place a three-wheeled motorcycle in the downtown district to check parking while another mounted officer patrolled the outlying districts against speeding through school zones, crashing red lights and stop signs.

However, he pondered when asked about the purchase of the machines and explained that he would first consult Police Chief Robert Burns before deciding what and how much equipment was needed

At the desk of the city's chief executive, Sowash, his chin in cupped hands, discussed the parking meter situation with unusual knowledge.

"Meters will solve the parking problem and at the same time bring some revenue to the city," Sowash asserted. "I'm back of them 100 per cent."

Favors Parking Lot.

He said however, that if council turned down the installation of the machines, he would propose as an alternative, a municipal-owned parking lot in the business district.

"I don't know where it would be," he added, "that's for council to figure out."

But the boy mayor had the governmental problems well in hand at noon and already had worked out a solution for the inadequate sewer system, relief and WPA improvement program.

It was a solution that would cure all the ills, he explained, but the "catch" was that it needed the backing of the majority of Mansfield voters.

"But I'm sure that Mansfield would respond to the program if presented to them fairly and squarely by city officials and the press."

The "Sowash plan," in short, is this:

The mayor advocates a bond issue to finance a comprehensive revamping of the sanitary sewer system to insure the public health of the community.

Backed by the taxpayers, Sowash claims that the funds would provide for a city-wide construction program that would take all employable persons off relief and thereby reduce the relief rolls to the point that the city could meet the expenditures through the monthly allocations made by the state.

In other parts of the city hall scouts held forth with the same serious-minded poise that was reflected by their chief executive.

Municipal Judge William Fishback was on the bench in court this morning and Solicitor Bruce Graves also attended the session as the city's legal counsel.

Fire Chief Lee Adams had the "run" of the fire department but up until noon there hadn't been an alarm.

City Auditor Robert Curry was on the job as was the second termer, Council Clerk Ralph Stanton, who was recording the events of last night's council meeting at which the ward councilmen attended. Richard Spetka spoke informally at the session last night.

Perkins Makes Sweeping Denial In Impeachment Case

SECRETARY OF LABOR CALLED BY COMMITTEE

Testimony Held Secret But Lawmakers Say Communism Charge Brought Denial.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —The first woman to sit in a president's cabinet—grave-mannered Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins—defended her official conduct today at a secret hearing of the house judiciary committee.

The secretary appeared before the committee to answer charges brought in impeachment proceedings instituted by Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, a Republican of New Jersey. She was prepared to testify publicly.

After a brief discussion among committee members, however, it was decided to hear Miss Perkins in executive session.

Accompanied by Gerard D. Reilly, solicitor of the department of labor, Miss Perkins was kept waiting for ten minutes in the office of Chairman Sumners (D) Texas while the committee made its decision on whether to hold an open hearing.

Confers With Solicitor.

Dresesd as somberly as usual and with an acustomed tricorn hat to top off her ensemble, the secretary talked in low tone with Reilly and glanced hurriedly over a prepared statement.

As Miss Perkins finally opened her defense against the effort of Thomas to remove her from office by the method of impeachment, she said:

"I appreciate the opportunity of appearing before this committee. I am conscious of the judicial atmosphere in which the committee seeks to meet its responsibility to the congress and to the country. I am not a lawyer."

At this point Chairman Sumners rapped his gavel and prevented Miss Perkins from proceeding with her statement.

Some members of the committee, it was learned, urged that Miss Perkins be heard in public on the ground that Rep. Thomas obtained such wide publicity when he rose in the house on the constitutional ground of impeachment and then called for an investigation.

Since the committee has heard other witnesses in secret, however, it decided to make no exception in the case of Miss Perkins.

The secretary, committee members said, entered a sweeping denial to charges of Thomas that she had failed to do her duty in the deportation case against Harry Bridges, in the Strecker deportation case and in general administration of laws affecting aliens.

Miss Perkins is understood to have flatly denied any sympathy with Communism and to have vigorously defended American democracy.

She is said to have asserted that she is just as eager "as any member of congress to preserve our American institutions and to defend them from damage by aliens."

In defending suspension of deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader, she is understood to have said that it would have been unwise to proceed until the supreme court renders a decision in the Strecker case. This case is expected to be argued in the court on Friday.

Amrine Says Inquiry Into Narcotic, Liquor Sales to Last Three More Weeks.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Continuation of the current investigation at Ohio penitentiary for at least three weeks will be necessary, Superintendent of Corrections W. F. Amrine said today.

Arine, inquiring into reports that prison privileges have been sold and that liquor and narcotics have been smuggled to convicts who could pay for them, wants more time to substantiate the "leads" he already has obtained.

Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood, who started the investigation, said that no action would be taken until Amrine submitted a report. He asserted he would not be content merely to correct conditions but would insist on ouster of any employes or officials responsible for them.

"Any person in authority who knew something wrong was going on or should have known it will be held accountable if the facts can be proved," Sherwood stated.

Sherwood said he was informed that there had been some complaints that Amrine was a personal friend of Warden James C. Woodard.

"What of it?" he inquired. "Friendship cannot stand in the path when there is a job to do."

Father of 3 Who Sold Cattle to Get Food, Wins Liberty

An embezzlement charge against Donald Beckholt, 23, of R. D. 1, Bellville, father of three small children, was dismissed and the youth was placed on probation today by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch in municipal court.

Arrested yesterday by deputy sheriffs on a warrant signed by Harry Strodtbeck, owner of a stock farm in Worthington township, Beckholt admitted that he sold a calf and two lambs from Strodtbeck's farm to obtain money to buy food for his family.

Although Strodtbeck contended the youth sold the animals, valued at $20, without permission, Beckholt told officers Strodtbeck had given the calf and lambs to him. Beckholt is employed on the farm. His probation period is for two years.

City officials explained that legislation to provide temporary funds to pay Stroup's salary had not been presented to council last night by City Engineer Statler under whom the man is employed.

City officials several days ago had agreed to seek a $100 appropriation to pay Stroup's salary to keep the survey going, after WPA officials of the real property inventory project closed the project with which he was connected. Legislation was necessary, however.

Officials said that it was understood that Statler was to have had the appropriation ordinance prepared for last night's meeting. Statler could not be reached for a statement

POLICE ASSURED OF CRUISER BUT THEY WILL WAIT FOR NEW CYCLE

Mansfield's police department is going to get a new cruiser but it will have to wait a little while for the three-wheeled motorcycle for traffic duty.

Council last night authorized the purchase of the new cruiser—an old one is to be sold—but couldn't act on the motorcycle purchase because legislation couldn't be prepared in time for last night's session. Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist who had favored such a purchase, explained that he had been unable to find a city fund from which the necessary $500 could be transferred to make the purchase.

The original plan had been to trade in one of the present motorcycles, a two-year-old cruiser and a 10-year-old patrol wagon, appropriate $500 by transfer and purchase a new cruiser and a three-wheeled motorcycle.

Since legislation to cover that transaction wasn't ready, council approved the purchase of a new cruiser, to cost not more than $900, and authorize the sale of the old one for not less than $225.

Council also approved the purchase of a new heavy duty truck for the street department. at a cost of no more than $1,500. The money is to come from the gasoline tax fund.

DISPUTE FLARES AT WRECKING OF OLD JUNIOR HIGH

Union Protests After Reaching Accord With Contractors on Other New School.

A labor dispute flared today at the John Simpson Junior high school project, a few hours after the Mansfield Building Trades council and its affiliated unions reached an agreement with contractors to eliminate possible trouble on the Johnny Appleseed project at the other side of the city.

M. W. Triplett, business agent of the Building Trades council, said two pickets would be sent to the John Simpson project this afternoon to protest the alleged employment of several non-union truck drivers and wreckers to speed up razing the old building.

One picket will represent Local No. 1,216 of the Common Laborers and Hod Carriers of America, and the other will carry the protest of Local No. 140, Truck Drivers union, Triplett said. Both organizations are American Federation of Labor affiliates.

Demolishing of the John Simpson building, which is in charge of the S. H. Tuber company, Cleveland, has been delayed by cold weather and a shortage of skilled union workers, representatives of the company said.

A working agreement with contractors on the $450,000 Johnny Appleseed project provides for employment of union men on skilled and unskilled jobs there, Triplett asserted. Building operations were started recently at the site on Cline avenue.

Major contractors on the project, a part of the city's $1,000,000 school building program, are the Steinle-Wolfe Construction company, Fremont, which has the general construction contract, and the E. F. Malone company, Mansfield, which will install plumbing and sewage equipment.

The agreement between the Building Trades council and the contractors followed a threat of trouble last week when the Malone company workers were picketed by Local 1,216, of the Common Building Laborers union. The controversy was settled without a halt in operations.

FINGERPRINTS LINK FUGITIVE WITH MURDER OF EX-TEACHER

(By International News Service)

MILTON, N. H.—With discovery of bloody fingerprints definitely linking him with the crime, search became nationwide today for John H. Howland, 25, Ohio state prison ex-convict and guitar playing former sailor, composer, flyer, barber and machinist, wanted for the murder of Miss Maude Horne, 61, retired spinster school teacher.

Major Ralph W. Caswell, deputy superintendent of state police, announced that fingerprint records of Howland received from Ohio authorities "check in every detail" with those found on a door casing and a dipper and basin in which the slayer washed his hands after bludgeoning and strangling Miss Horne in her home last Friday.

Circulars bearing the description and fingerprint formula of Howland were sent to police in key cities throughout the country.

The circular also contained a description of his cousin, Miss Aida Butler, 15, who disappeared with Howland. Police said they were convinced Miss Butler was a witness to the murder but took no hand in it, and was probably forced to accompany Howland when he fled. Parents of the girl feared for her safety.

Revelation that fingerprints linked Howland with the crime came after disclosure that last October, Miss Horne frustrated a death-bed marriage of her uncle, Charles Horne, allegedly designed to gain control of his $7,500 estate. It was also revealed that shortly before her death, Miss Horne had compiled a list of household effects which were missing from the estate of her uncle when she inherited it, and which she told neighbors she suspected Howland of stealing.

'SIT-DOWN' AT GALION KEEPS EMPLOYES IDLE

275 Off Job, Workers Differ on Reason for Five-Hour Strike at Plant.

GALION—Some 275 workers at the Stratbury Manufacturing company were involved in a "sit-down" strike at the plant Tuesday between the hours of 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. All departments were affected by the strike excepting the cutters.

Recently an NLRB hearing was held here on a complaint filed by the United Garment Workers of America, Local 147, affiliated with the A. F. of L. to determine whether it or the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, Local 325, affiliated with the C. I. O., will represent the employes of the Stratbury plant in collective bargaining.

While some employes at the plant contended that the sit-down Tuesday was for the purpose of a hike in pay, representatives of the Amalgamated committee stated that the strike was held principally because the Amalgamated union wanted a "closed shop," contract with the company.

Ben Peppercorn of Cleveland, C. I. O. board chairman, came to Galion, Tuesday and after a temporary agreement pending further negotiations was reached with the company officials of the plant, the workers went back to work at 3 p. m. The plant closes around 4 o'clock. Workers, however, were told to report for work this morning.

Harold B. Newman, president and treasurer of the company, stated that he was not at the plant during the day and did not know anything about the trouble.

with the German and Italian governments.

It was said that Franco also, while still insisting on unconditional surrender by the Loyalists, promised France that he would repatriate all Spanish "non-criminal" refugees, civilian and military, as soon as possible.

In return the Nationalist leader demanded of France:

1—That any Spanish Loyalist leaders who remain in France be prevented from engaging in anti-Nationalist plotting.

2—That France permit no preparation on French soil of a counter-revolution.

3—That France hand to the Natinalists millions of dollars in gold brought to France by the Loyalist syndicalist, Anarchist and Socialist labor unions.

Franco also registered an official objection to plans to send Spanish works of art, now in France, to Geneva in custody of the League of Nations. Franco said that the Nationalists did not intend to engage in any league activities and would not belong to the league after the war.

It was regarded as possible that Franco's pledges might become the basis for French-British recognition of the Nationalist government.

Fighting Renewed In Catalonia.

PERPIGNAN, FRANCE—(AP)—Unexpected fighting broke out today between Spanish insurgent forces and retreating government troops in Puigcerda region near the French frontier.

The renewed fighting followed the breakdown of peace efforts yesterday and a declaration by Dr. Juan Negrin, premier of government Spain, that he would fight to the finish rather than submit to insurgent demands for unconditional surrender.

The action drew artillery and warplanes into battle in the snow-covered Pyrenees from which government militiamen, including cavalry and infantry units, were withdrawing into France.

U. S. Takes Stand on Insurgent Recognition.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The United States will decline to recognize the Franco regime in Spain so long as Italian troops and German bombing squadrons remain in occupation of Spanish soil, International News Service was informed today on high authority.

Eventual recognition of a victorious insurgent government is deemed virtually certain, however. But such action, it was stressed, is conditioned upon many important "ifs" that future events must first clarify.

British Man o' War Arrives at Minorca.

LONDON — (AP) — A British cruiser arrived today at Minorca, disputed island in the Spanish Balearics, while the London cabinet considered measures to prevent Italy and Germany from obtaining control of the island.

At the same time officials acknowledged that Britain had asked Spanish insurgent Generalissimo Franco to agree to a truce in the 30-months old civil war. But they declined to disclose whether Franco had replied or, if he had, what his answer was.

The 9,750-ton cruiser Devonshire had dropped anchor in Port Mahon, strategic and well fortified harbor of Minorca, only island of the Balearics which the Spanish government has held since early in the war.

Neither the admiralty nor the foreign office would discuss the Devonshire's mission at Minorca.

'Too Late,' Fascist Press Tells Britain.

ROME—(AP)—The Fascist press declared today it was "too late" for 11th hour moves to recognize insurgent Generalissimo Franco by nations wanting to get on good terms with "New Spain."

The press statements appeared as reports were circulated abroad that Britain and France might offer loans to Franco.

Top Cast In Players' 'Thriller'

MRS. H. H. SCHETTLER

BEN GOODENOUGH

Two members of the Mansfield Community Players chalked up new credits on their theatrical scoreboard last night with their characterizations in "Night Must Fall." Mrs. Herbert H. Schettler, as a mean but gullible old woman, and Ben Goodenough as the baby-faced boy with an inferiority complex which found vent in murder, topped the cast in one of the best "thrillers" the Players have ever staged.

* * * * *

'NIGHT MUST FALL' JOINS LIST OF PLAYERS' BEST PRODUCTIONS

room in 1926 to "Night Must Fall" presented last night at Senior High school auditorium.

There have been some splendid productions in those years—"Trial of Mary Dugan," "Sun Up," "My Son," "Truth About Blayds," "The Royal Family," "First Lady"—and there have been some pretty terrible ones.

To the list of "best productions" in the past 13 years must now be added "Night Must Fall," and to the list of best performances by players must be added the roles played last night by Ben Goodenough and Corinne (Mrs. H. H.) Schettler.

Goodenough, who has been interested in amateur theatricals since he left short pants and is now assistant director of the Players, has played several characters in Community plays in the last few years. Sometimes he was good and sometimes he wasn't. Last night, as the boy who was tortured with a twisted mind and a murder complex, he held the audience of 700 tensely waiting for his next move. One moment he was gay and ingratiating, winning the confidence of an old woman, the next he was the boasting victim of pathomania, smothering his humiliation at being a servant in delusions of future power and position. With his timing alone he created an undercurrent of impending tragedy.

Mrs. Schettler played the old woman whose meanness melted before Danny's ingratiating solicitude, making it very simple and easy for him to murder her later. She has never tuned in a mediocre performance with the Players—despite the fact that she loses weight over every role and develops shaking palsy the night of the performance.

Her ability to emulate the voice of an old person, her understanding last night of the meanness, the childish gullibility of the character she portrayed, helped her to create a character that was believable and sympathetic despite her eccentricities. At least you felt sorry when she was smothered to death by the one person whom she liked.

It was a small cast, but each was important in relation to telling the story. Betty Osbun, who has done some excellent character roles with the Players, upheld her reputation in the role of the brutally frank housekeeper.

Mrs. John McCann was sincere and unaffected as the lonely girl whose good sense waged a losing battle with her heart, which almost led to her death, and John McCann did a nice piece of work as the prosaic English suitor. Miss Geraldine Hostettler upheld the standard of quality set by the major players in the character of the half-witted maid who had been "betrayed" by Danny.

Other characters, smaller but important to the action, were capably done by Jane Bacon as the nurse, Dan Reese as the Scotland Yard man and Francis O'Brien, as the chief justice who gave the prologue which told the ending of the gruesome story.

Wherever the play was discussed today, it was quite generally agreed that Mrs. E. K. Bacon who has directed the Community plays for the past four or five years, (and who was a character player in that first presentation of "Ice Bound" years ago), never did a better piece of theater craftsmanship than "Night Must Fall."

The two curtain calls at the end of the show, which brought out first Goodenough and then the entire cast, was just as much a tribute to the director as to the players.

Laurence Todd and his large group of musicians, which practically filled the pit last night, added an enjoyable musical background to the presentation.

RELEASES TWO BOND CONCERNS

Chapman's Last Judicial Act Closes Liability of Firms in Treasurer's Case.

(By Staff Correspondent)

ASHLAND—As a parting act before he leaves office tonight, Common Pleas Judge C. C. Chapman released the American Surety company and the New York Casualty company from $40,000 bonded liability for County Treasurer H. O. Faber, who is under indictment for embezzlement, forgery and destruction of public records.

The bonding companies appealed to common pleas court for release after Ashland county commissioners rejected their applications a month ago.

Faber, who is still in office despite the indictments against him, was granted 10 days in which to obtain new bond. If he is unable to find bondsmen by that time, his office will be declared vacant and county commissioners will appoint a new treasurer, Judge Chapman said.

If Faber furnishes private bond it must be double the amount he has had, or $80,000, Judge Chapman decreed.

Arraignment of Faber and his son, Olen R. Faber, former deputy treasurer, on the three joint indictments against them, will be held after H. E. Culbertson be comes common pleas judge tomorrow.

Judge Chapman will retire from the office today after serving since 1927. He previously served two terms as prosecuting attorney of Ashland county.

administration to prospective French purchasers of new-type American fighting planes.

Mr. Roosevelt raised the other issues yesterday in a message to congress on relief and in his press conference.

Challenges Economy Bloc.

The message was a challenge to the congressional economy bloc led by Democrats in both houses which trimmed $150,000,000 from his Jan. 5 request for $875,000,000 with which to aid the unemployed through June. He asked that congress immediately consider raising the additional sum and said "human decency" forbade reducing relief rolls this winter.

From his press conference came a letter to Judge Roberts of the western Virginia federal district court whose nomination to that office the senate rejected by a vote of 72 to 9. Roberts was defeated because Sens. Glass and Harry F. Byrd, D., Va., both informed the senate judiciary committee that nomination was personally offensive or obnoxious to them.

Challenging Glass directly, Mr. Roosevelt told Roberts that the senator had stated that:

"As a matter of fact, the president of the United State did give to the governor of Virginia the veto power over nominations made by the two Virginia United States senators."

The president added that he was sorry Glass had made such a statement which "I can only excuse on the ground of anger or forgetfulness."

The president told Roberts he was the "innocent victim" in the case.

"I am sorry you had to be the victim. Against you not one syllable has been uttered in derogation of your character, or ability in the legal profession or your record on the bench."

Tentative Dates of Summer Camp Session Are Set

A tentative summer camp period for Mansfield youths at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Camp Nelson Dodd was set at a meeting of the Ohio Y. M. C. A. Boys' Work Secretaries association in Columbus yesterday.

A two-week period during the middle of July has been tentatively set for Mansfield boys at the camp, E. V. Donaldson, camp director, announced. An effort will be made to extend the period to three weeks if there are enough boys who want to attend, Ralph B. Chapman, general secretary said.

The camp is expected to be open for the season about the middle of June, Chapman said. Dates will be announced later.

W. H. Womes, director of the Wisconsin state Y. M. C. A. camp, and a member of the state staff, was principal speaker at the one-day meeting. Chapman represented the Mansfield "Y" at the meeting.

ASHLAND — Plans were made here to have a patriotic program commemorating the birthdays of former presidents, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and William McKinley, by members of the Mrs. Peter Redding Tent No. 83 of the Daughters of Union Veterans. The meeting will be held Feb. 20.

Drug Restores Memory To Mysterious Mr. 'X'

Twilight Sleep Enables 8-Year Amnesia Victim To Recall Past.

(By United Press)

JACKSON, Miss.—A 70-year-old amnesia victim nervously awoke today at the Mississippi State hospital from the twilight sleep of a powerful hypnotic drug with a memory that bridges the gap in his life since he was found here in 1930, a nameless wanderer.

The mysterious Mr. "X" remembered he was William H. Lawrence of Birmingham and Tuscaloosa, Ala., and recognized pictures of relatives left by his brother and sister, Ben H. Lawrence of Tuscaloosa and Mrs. J. P. Haley of Marion, Ala.

Events of his life up to 1930 were recalled and bit by bit he gained a recollection of events happening since he was found in a dazed condition by a policeman on Jackson's streets.

He remembered being in the Baptist hospital here before being transferred to the State hospital.

Miss Lignon Forbes of the State hospital staff believed that Lawrence had begun to connect the two periods and bridge the gap in his memory between 1930 and 1931 while in the hospital.

Mr. "X" awakened from the drugged sleep last night to look into the faces of his brother and sister and remembered he was William H. Lawrence, former insurance salesman. But the place that has been his home for the past eight years was strange to him

His brain was fogged with a misty veil of unreality—where was he and why was he there?

Then Dr. F. A. Donaldson and nurses laid him back for more sleep—a more natural sleep, but one still held in the twilight of the waning effects of the drug.

When Mr. X stirred from his sleep today he opened his eyes on a strange world, a world that gradually took on meaning.

Miss Forbes' voice coaxed out the words from a memory that recalled his name, and relatives whose pictures he was presented, that remembered that day when all was lost and he stood on a street a helpless old man of 62.

His relatives came here after seeing a picture of the celebrated Mr. "X" of radio, magazine and newspaper fame in a newspaper. They had with them a family group picture taken in 1929 showing Mr. "X," or their brother, William H. Lawrence, sitting beside Mrs. Haley

This picture was necessary to the experiment. The drug is effective in amnesia cases only when the physician has some object to show the patient suggesting details of a past incident in his life. Previously the only clue to his identity had been a belt buckle engraved with the initial "L."

When he met his brother and sister, Lawrence did not recognize them. The picture meant nothing to him until he was under the influence of the drug. Then he recalled it, and gradually, previous and later events of his whole life up to the time of his affliction.

His case attracted national attention when he appeared on a radio program a few weeks ago, described himself and appealed for anyone with missing relatives or friends of that description to endeavor to identify him. A picture in a Memphis, Tenn., newspaper was called to the attention of Mrs. Haley and she believed she recognized him as her brother. She was virtually certain of it after she had come here and seen "Mr. X," but it was not until the victim verified it in his trance that the identification was complete.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Germany's Lost Friends.

ONE thing Adolf Hitler has done for Germany is not mentioned in his speeches but shows up in other ways. He has turned a growing friendly and sympathetic feeling in this country into dislike and distrust.

In the years when the late Gustav Stresemann was Germany's foreign minister, a good deal was accomplished toward restoring Germany to a place of power and respect among the nations recently her enemies. The security pact with France, the Locarno treaty, and Germany's entry into the League of Nations on equal terms with the Allied nations were some of Stresemann's successes. In 1929 he won the promise of early removal of Allied troops from the Rhine and participated in negotiations greatly reducing Germany's war reparations bills.

These achievements were all regarded as steps toward further modification of the Versailles treaty, which had already come to be widely condemned as cruel and impossible of enforcement. There was much sympathy in the United States, in England and even in France for the post-war Germans, and a growing desire to help them out of their war-caused social, economic and financial troubles.

All that has been reversed since Hitler's rise to power. A year ago, according to a national poll, 24 per cent of Americans favored returning Germany's colonies to her. Today only 17 per cent still favor that idea.

Council Defeats Sunday Beer Ban.

BY A VOTE of 5 to 3, with one member absent, city council last night turned down an ordinance to prohibit Sunday sale of 3.2 beer in Mansfield.

The five members of council who voted against passage of this ordinance apparently assume they are expressing the views of their constituents, whom they are elected to represent, and that these constituents favor continuance of sale of 3.2 beer on Sundays.

In any event, the ordinance was defeated on its final reading, and as Councilman Kyle, one of its opponents, so aptly remarked: "It's up to the state."

Physical Examination Before Marriage.

AFTER a number of other states have acted along similar lines, the Ohio legislature is now asked to consider a bill to make physical examinations compulsory before marriage licenses are issued, to abolish common law marriages and to advance minimum marriageable ages.

A companion bill would establish a six-months' period after divorce before the decree would become final.

Introduction of both bills follows four years of study by a commission on marriage, divorce and separation, which was created by former Governor White in 1934.

Under the proposed new code the marriageable age for males would be raised from 18 to 20, and for females from 16 to 18. It would also be required that applicants for marriage licenses present a physician's certificate showing that both parties were free from venereal diseases, epilepsy, feeble-mindedness and insanity.

Whether Ohio is ready to take the progressive step such legislation would represent is not yet assured, but serious consideration should at least be given to the proposal to require physical examinations showing freedom from venereal diseases as a preliminary to issuance of marriage licenses.

The frightful results of marriages in which an unsuspected syphiletic condition of one of the parties served to wreck happiness and inflict misery on offspring of the union, are of too common knowledge in every community to require stressing of the contention that a physical examination, voluntary or compulsory, should precede marriage—not alone in the interests of the contracting parties but also as a safeguard against production of children bearing a parental taint.

The Growing Work of Boys Town.

HEARTENING word comes, that, despite constant financial problems, Father Flanagan is making progress with his Boys Town, Neb., venture and is planning to take more boys into the home this spring.

Interest in Boys Town, greatly extended by the motion picture of a year or so ago in which it was the subject, has continued to grow, but the picture had the unexpected effect of cutting down contributions. The impression seems to have been gained by many people that the enterprise was being adequately financed, which has not been the case.

Accepting an invitation to speak at the Boys Town commencement exercises in June, Charles B. Driscoll, popular writer, said: "To tell the truth, I'd rather do that than deliver the commencement address at Harvard. It's a rare privilege to be able to say something that might conceivably help even one of those boys into a career of usefulness."

That is a fine thought to keep in mind when community problems of juvenile delinquency are being considered, or when examples are being set for young people to follow.

College Students Repay Loans.

EXPERIENCE in Mansfield with repayment of student loans appears to carry through nationally as well.

While loans to college students might, on the surface, seem to be rather bad financial risks, Northwestern university's loan officer rates them among the best.

He says of students needing loans to complete a college education: "They are under age, have no income, often lack responsible guarantors and come from poor families—yet their record for repaying university loans is remarkable."

Character, he thinks, is the key to the riddle. Surplus money can be put to few better uses than in making it possible for poor, but ambitious and mentally alert young people to further their education.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Smoldering suspicion in the minds of certain congressional groups about our foreign policy aims found new fuel in the president's purported statement to the senate military affairs committee that this government is deliberately helping France and England in their efforts to match the strength of totalitarian states.

This correspondent has reported before the outright suspicion on Capitol Hill that the U. S. has an unwritten alliance with England and France and that the armament program of the past two years is part of the network.

The developments with regard to airplane orders by France and England have not allayed such suspicion.

The president himself made no public pronouncement of any plan to put the airplane factories of the United States at the disposal of France and England as a deliberate policy of matching strength of the democracies against that of the totalitarian states. But the committee conferees allowed enough to leak out to convince reporters that such were his plans.

Welcomes Plane Purchases.

THE president did say at two recent press conferences that he was glad to have France and England buy planes in the United States for two reasons. First, it put idle mechanics to work. Second, it helped U. S. plants to perfect the technique of mass production. But when he was asked whether he would welcome the same use of American plants to build German and Italian planes he declined to answer.

Much of the suspicion of his foreign policy arises from the trans-Mississippi states, the Dakotas and their neighbors, where anything smacking of participation in European affairs long has been distrusted. Several midwestern votes were cast against U. S. entry into the World war. Senator Norris of Nebraska cast one, the only surviving senator who did so. Trans-Mississippi's lack of enthusiasm for the World war was of sufficient concern to the wartime administration that special pep-talkers were sent out to the Dakota country and adjacent states.

Their American loyalty was not questioned then and it is not now. But many of these trans-Mississippians suspect Wilsonian enthusiasm for international share-and-share-alike in world peace problems is almost, if not altogether, equalled by President Roosevelt's policy of international moral suasion, backed by war implements.

Sees No Commitment.

PRESIDENT Roosevelt purportedly told the senators who called on him at the White House that while the United States was willing to turn American airplane production over to France and England, at least until this country needs to use them, this did not represent any sort of commitment to aid the two countries in event a war developed.

It is just there that the president divides with the decidedly suspicious trans-Mississippian members. Senator Nye of North Dakota bluntly declared that the airplane agreement with France amounted to an alliance. Senator Clark of Missouri insisted the thing needed investigation.

What is more to the point, a goodly number of these trans-Mississippians, together with some from other sections, are frankly suspicious that the administration is committed farther than it admits. Repeatedly the president and Secretary of State Hull have denied any alliance with France or England.

If the French airplane business does not give these congressmen the opportunity they seek to "get at the facts," as they say, they will look for a further opportunity when the big defense bills come along.

Secret Conferences Mean Trouble

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Of course President Roosevelt should not have made a secret of that conference of his with the senate military affairs committee. He might have known that the senators who attended it would tell all about it to the newspapermen as soon as they got out of the White House.

Maybe he did know it. Plenty of commentators suspect that he insisted on secrecy simply to intensify interest in the event, thereby getting still more publicity out of it. However, he evidently did not foresee that the 16 or 17 senators present would be fairly sure to disclose differing and possibly conflicting stories.

If the whole out-doors had been invited in, there could not be any dispute as to the correct answer to the question, "Did or didn't 'F. D.' say that Uncle Sam's 'frontier' or 'first line of defense' is 'on the Rhine' or in 'France and England'?" Too many people would have heard him say it or not say it—and there'd be a stenographic record.

Driven to Extreme.

As it is, the president is driven to the extreme of declaring that the yarn referred to is a "deliberate lie"—middling strong language. "Teddy" Roosevelt used to speak of "liars," but he was not quite that emphatic.

And an additional trouble is that at least five of the 16 or 17 senators present stand pat that they did hear the president express himself approximately as quoted. Some recall that he said "frontier"; some that he said "first line"; some that he said "on the Rhine"; some that he said "France and England."

It seems like streching the candy middling thin to draw such distinctions.

Yet it is hard not to do so. One does not like to assume that the White House tenant is over-doing himself in terming a handful of senators "deliberate liars." But if they are not, what is the president, in so denominating them? Perish that idea also!

Nix on Secrecy.

"F. D." was not satisfied with consulting secretly with the senate military affairs committee. Having consulted with these latter gentry he called another committee into his confidence to clarify what he had discussed with the military affairs folk.

Thus the conversation was everlastingly mixed up.

A lot of congressmen were excluded from these gatherings.

Now, a senator or a representative is as jealous as a soprano.

Such of these "birds" as have been called especially into consultation at the executive mansion naturally are flattered, even if they are anti-New Dealers — it makes them look important.

But the rank and file of legislators (including neglected New Dealers, are sore as boils.

Secrecy!

Right on top of this other secrecy comes monetary secrecy.

What about the "stabilization" contract? I will gamble that the average man never heard of it.

In pre-war days?

Suppose, then, that an American tourist was coming home from, say, France. He changed his French money into American money and knew what he was getting, about, in American money. At that time the French franc was worth about five to the American dollar. The tourist knew what he was entitled to and got it.

International currencies no longer mean much. The individual tourist can stand international fluctuations, but they raise Cain with big business.

So—

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, along with Great Britain and France, fixed up a scheme to stabilize international exchange.

It has involved 2 billion dollars.

It has worked tolerably well

But, nobody knows HOW or WHY it has worked.

I always thought I didn't know how or why—on the theory that I was too darned dumb.

Now I discover that senators and financials do not know, either.

Morgenthau himself relates that he cannot disclose it confidentially.

Secrecy?—of various kinds!

Dangerous Bellville Crossing

Editor News-Journal:

Why, in this day and age, when science is so far advanced mechanically, should men and women lose life and limb, for the sake of a mere light (flasher) at railroad crossings and intersections? Why with our present day life span at a low and our mortality at a high should we allow calamities and catastrophies, all for the sake of the cost of the installation of a mere safety device?

Why not use every safety precaution known to man? Does it take the loss of life and limb to have the rest of us awaken to the realization that railroad crossings on main highways are extremely dangerous, and every precaution for safety should and must be taken?

No, I am not blaming the driver; he probably used all precautions but was unfortunate in not hearing the "tinkle" of the crossing bell. Hundreds of people use this crossing daily. It might have been your misfortune or mine. How many times have we passed an intersection not realizing the danger—but certainly we would have seen a light. We who have not been struck at similar crossings are extremely fortunate, we should thank our lucky stars.

Some weeks ago thinking citizens of Bellville circulated a petition, asking council to have the B. and O. railroad install flashers to replace the bell at the crossing on state route 13 at the north end of Main street. Let us hope that our council will unanimously adopt this resolution, before other catastrophies befall us? We can see what he cannot hear. Let us have flashers installed. Here is hoping this warning will be heeded by local and state authorities. Lights are far less expensive than life and limb.

Tuberculin Tests for Schools Urged.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In a discussion the other night by one of the leaders of the movement to eradicate tuberculosis in the United States, he made four especially important points.

First, he emphasized the value of the use of the tuberculin test in examining all school children, high school children, and especially teachers. The reason for the examination of teachers is that tuberculosis of the lungs probably is transmitted entirely by contact from one person to the other—usually from an adult to a child. The adult who is a carrier is entirely innocent and has no idea of the existence of tuberculosis. Tuberculosis may be a disease almost entirely without symptoms. The teacher ascribes the cough to nasal catarrh, nervousness, any one of a dozen things besides facing the possibility that an examination should be made.

There are many cases of teachers who have left home perfectly healthy, gone to a normal school and caught the disease from another student. Then this infected teacher is transferred to a teaching institution where she comes in contact with pupils, and a large proportion of them develop some type of tuberculosis.

Can Be Eliminated.

This can all be eliminated by insisting upon tuberculin test for every teacher as he or she begins the vocational career.

While we can arrest tuberculosis once it is started, we cannot stop the spreading of the germs and, therefore, the only thing to do is to isolate the source of infection. This was the second point made by the tuberculosis specialist.

His third point was that the tuberculin reaction is 100 per cent efficient. If a person has had tuberculosis at any time in his life, whether active or passive, he will react positively. The tuberculin test, then, is simply the first step in determining the status of a tuberculous individual. The second step is to have an X-ray picture of the chest made to see whether the case is "open." If it is, it should be treated.

The best method of treating an open case today is to collapse the lung, or the collapse of the chest. Nothing else seems to be of permanent value.

Final Step.

The final step in the attack against tuberculosis is the removal of the other important source of contagion besides human beings, infected cattle.

With these measures, the universal use of tuberculin testing, following back an infected case to the source, quarantining the source and closing open forms of tuberculosis, we may expect to reduce the incidence of tuberculosis to the vanishing point. The actual number of deaths from tuberculosis has decreased steadily, but the decrease has come virtually to a standstill since the depression. Most communities are unable to apply the universal tuberculin tests on account of economies, but in order to eradicate this plague finally, such measures will have to be adopted.

A Farmer's Diary

On a City Street.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I PARKED my car along the curb and stood for an instant beside it. Four little girls came along and stopped beside the show window of a big store. They were from seven to ten, and completely absorbed in their window shopping. I watched them point and touch the thick plate glass with their fingers, excitedly, at because they were so obviously poor, and unable to buy what they saw I was interested in what their viewpoint might be. Their shabby coats did not protect them well, when swirls of snow swooped around their watchful faces. Two wore stockings too large, with holes. The other two had bare legs, blue with cold. One rested her foot upon the toe, and I could see the bare sole through the broken bottom of her shoe.

"That's my dress." I heard the oldest say, "the silk one, trimmed in gold. Look how it shines! I'd have that hat with the diamonds on, then even under the street lights, it'd glitter like a million. Then I'd go to parties and dances and be one of them everybody's want to dance with, like in the movies."

"Looky at that snow suit and mittens. That'd fit me," remarked one little girl, with cold blue hands and shivering legs. "I wisht I was that storekeeper's little kid—then I'd be it."

"Now Jane, don't talk so big," the other little girl told her. "If your Pop had work and my Mother wasn't sick, we'd likely buy things. You know it. We allus did."

"All the same," returned the other, "whenever I look in there I feel warmer, for just a minute—and I can play I'm a rich little kid who doesn't want anything."

As I walked away, my own imagination was busy. I, too, was buying the contents of that store window—was hiring men to do profitable work—was wrestling with this country's problems of health and economics.

The four small girls fluttered by me and I saw them vanish into the warmth of a dime store. Their faces were animated, their chatter went on and on. For some reason, the phrase of the Galilean so long ago, came to my mind: "The poor ye have always among you."

Listen, World!

Wild Geese—Winging Home.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

OFTEN, as a child, I would wake to hear them passing . . . their fierce, far clamor skirling through the night. Then, shivering with cold and excitement, but drawn by some irresistible need I could not define, I would crawl out of bed, tip-toe outside—and the enormous night would close around me.

And sometimes there would be fog, filled with the restless muttering of the sea . . . and the brackish tang of the marshes . . . and the drip and sigh of the great, gray gums, lost in the winding mist . . . and the muffled toll of the bells, warning . . . warning . . .

And sometimes the night would be clear—an endless vault of glittering black, opening out and out beyond the moon . . . above the lonely huddle of shadow where I stood staring . . . my small toes digging into the comforting, familiar soil . . .

But always, whether it was clear or foggy, their cry would come falling, falling, out of the far, high places between the stars . . . the honk of the wild geese passing in the night . . . the cry of the wild geese winging their way home.

But how could they know, I wondered, where that home might be. How could they speed so swiftly and so surely through the blind and trailess night.

So, long after their cry had ceased, I would stand, caught up in the wonder of it all, knowing that I had seen a great marvel but having no words as yet to fit its strange dark glory.

It is long ago, now, since the child who was I, crept out when the gray geese called. And the years have overlaid most things with their deadening dust. But the wonder of those midnight voyages is still as shuddering fresh as on the first night it came. Still my heart wakes when the wild geese cry . . . wakes and reaches and tries to answer as one of their own flock who had been earth-trapped, its poor wings clipped, might try to answer that far challenge from the sky.

What is there in them, I wonder, that speaks behind that cry . . . what wild, free spirit that no night can blind, no storm can silence?

And what is there in me that answers when they call . . . what mystery is hidden deep within this wing-clipped flesh, that still recalls a cry my ears have never heard . . . that still turns blindly toward a trail my eyes have never seen?

What is there in both of us that knows the trail—through the darkness and the storms?

I do not know. But some day I will know. There is something in me that will know. There is something in me that has never forgotten—

Something in me that waits—

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It isn't often that you see comedy in any operating room. Drama, yes. But comedy is a rare item once the chips are down and the boys in white are at their professional chores.

We had been kicking around one of the Manhattan hospitals all morning and were having lunch in a sort of mess hall reserved for internes and doctors. They were talking about the Old Man. Every hospital has an Old Man. He is like the Colonel of a hard-bitten but successful regiment. Legends and funny stories grow up about him. He is the peg upon which much of the hospital's prestige is hung. He is, well, he's the Old Man.

While we were talking somebody thrust his head through the door and said, "The Old Man takes the Sawyer case in 3-b. Want to go up?"

Operating room 3-b is where surgery of only a specified nature is practiced. I had never seen the Old Man, though I'd heard enough about him to write a book.

PERHAPS I should tell you that the Old Man is eccentric about his dress. He wants no part of the linen or white duck conventionally worn by doctors everywhere. His favorite costume is a pair of long white woolen drawers augmented by a rubber apron, shoes, mask, gloves, and cap.

Well, we went up to 3-b, and there was the Old Man looking like a ghost who had lost his pants. The temperature must have been 90. It is always like that in an operating room. His assistants were ready and waiting. The nurses had all the paraphernalia at their finger tips.

Under the lights lay a man who was tabbed for about everything on the calendar. They were going to start with his appendix and go right down the line. At his head, surrounded by vast tubes with meters, barometers and gauges, sat the anaesthetist. He was turning a tiny wheel and gazing intently at an apparatus that gave a reading of the patient's respiration. I suppose you would call it that. Suddenly he looked up and nodded to the Old Man. The nod said, "He's ready."

THE Old Man glanced about him. His nurses and assistants were at their stations. Suddenly a gloved hand shot out and in it lay a tiny, bright knife. The Old Man accepted it. With it he marked an imaginary line of incision. In a flash, the knife was biting surely and swiftly into the field of operation.

That is fast work once you are under way. You don't stop to chat, unless you are lecturing, and even if the walls should cave in you go right on as though nothing had happened at all.

I guess the operation had been on about 15 minutes when one of the nurses said, "Doctor, you are losing your trousers."

This was only too true. A button had given way and the Old Man's long white woolen drawers were slowly falling away from his hips.

Without looking up he said, "Say that again."

"Your pants, Doctor—they're falling."

"Then get 'em up," he shouted, "Get 'em up."

The nurse leaped to the Old Man's side. She caught his pants with both hands and began to hitch them up. She gave them a couple of tugs and clipped them to his shirt with a hemostat. A hemostat is a scissors-like clip designed to arrest the flow of blood. You clip them on veins as an operation progresses. It is probable that in all surgery no hemostat ever before has been used to hold up a doctor's pants while he operated on a fellow man.

As for the doctor—he went right on as though losing his pants was the most natural thing in the world. As for me—I know if I live to be a thousand I'll never forget the swift action of that nurse or the Old Man's roar as he shouted, "Get 'em up!"

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Bright as a Dollar."

The gold dollar is not what it used to be, nor for that matter, the silver dollar either—that miniature cartwheel, a few of which, despite the cumbersomeness of the coin, used to jingle in most every pocket.

Those were the days in which was born the expression "bright as a dollar," now as figurative as paper money, but then having a real significance.

For, in rubbing against each other, the big silver coins, kept polishing each other up till they looked like new, whence "bright as a dollar" became a by-word.

Refugees In Ohio River Valley Return to Homes as Waters Drop

Receding flood waters of the Ohio river valley in Ohio and Kentucky have permitted thousands of refugees to return to their homes and have also permitted rehabilitation work to begin. These four pictures show the flood waters dropping, after they had driven some 30,000 persons from their homes and caused a flood scare reminiscent of the disaster of last year.

FIGHT DISEASE IN FLOOD AREA

Health Officials Immunize Thousands in Kentucky as River Keeps Dropping.

(Pictures on Page 5)

(By Associated Press)

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Health authorities today immunized thousands of eastern Kentucky mountain people against pneumonia, influenza and typhoid—more feared than the overflowing streams which swept the hill country and flooded lowlands.

As rehabilitation progressed and the crest of the Ohio river slowly moved toward the Mississippi, the Works Progress Administration was criticized by Representative May (D., Ky.) for its "indefensible refusal to co-operate" in aiding flood sufferers.

E. A. Marye, divisional WPA director here, said, however, that the agency's workers were assisting in evacuation of refugees, "cleaning polluted wells and cisterns and aiding in the repair of utilities, bridges and water lines."

Vaccine for 250,000 persons was rushed into the 30 flood-stricken mountain counties yesterday by Red Cross and Kentucky health department authorities.

The Ohio dropped at Huntington, W. Va., and Cincinnati and rose slightly here and at downriver points in Kentucky and Indiana. Scores were driven from their southern Indiana homes.

The Kentucky, Licking and Cumberland rivers were almost normal in eastern Kentucky, but muddy, slimy roads made certain parts of the section inaccessible.

TRIAL NEAR END

Jury to Get New Mexico's WPA Political Fraud Case Soon.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—(INS)—Attorneys began their final arguments today in the federal court trial of 25 men and women accused of a criminal conspiracy to divert New Mexico's WPA to political use.

The defense rested its case unexpectedly yesterday after using less than half of the 121 witnesses it had subpoenaed, the majority of whom were character witnesses.

At the conclusion of the defense case, the government introduced rebuttal testimony designed to establish that one of the principal defendants, Stanley W. P. Miller, former assistant U. S. district attorney and a son-in-law of U. S. Senator Dennis Chavez, actually proposed to WPA supervisory employes that they trade WPA jobs for votes and political support for various issues and candidates.

TAX COLLECTION DELAYED CITY ACTS TO ISSUE $60,000 IN NOTES

Legislation providing for the issuance of $60,000 in notes in the anticipation of the collection of the 1939 property taxes had been authorized by city council today.

The notes provide for the borrowing of $40,000 for general bond retirement and $20,000 to supplement the general fund.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley explained that the authorization, an annual affair, was a "protective measure" because delayed tax collections may tend to cripple the city's finances.

Four damage claims submitted to council last night were referred to the claims committee. A fifth was turned over to the city solicitor by Council President Karl P. Troll on recommendation of Councilman Arthur L. Croak, chairman of the claim committee.

Croak asked that the claim of Frank G. Witter, Central avenue, be referred to the solicitor as the city had made attempts to repair the damage to Witter's property but he had refused to accept it.

Other claims were:

Henry J. Brumenshenkel for $200 architect fees on Liberty park building; J. Boyd Hicks, $300 for damage to Central avenue property as result of street improvement; G. R. Elarton, 25½ Douglas avenue, $56.45 damages to automobile as result of street openings, and G. A. Doran, 1059 Park avenue west, $13.82 for damage to basement as the result of sewer backing into cellar.

Miscellaneous business transacted by council included:

Authorized the sale of a typewriter in the public service department for not less than $25.

Approved the transfer of 56.50 in municipal court funds for the purchase of office furniture.

Amended city salary ordinance to provide for a $20 a month salary boost in the city's share towards the employment of a humane officer.

Ordered the vacation of an unnamed alley running south from Woodward avenue.

Approved the purchase of 560 feet of water pipe for a price not to exceed $500

Shultz Forgets Mild Manner in Argument With Kyle Over Parking Meter Trial.

by Shultz.

"Mr. Kyle shouldn't wonder about such things. There's records here where he can find that information," Shultz cut in.

Kyle reiterated that he still questioned the legality of the parking meters.

James E. Crum, chairman of council's special committee, then interrupted only momentarily to say that he had plenty of data on the machines and that he would be glad to explain the "whole business."

Kyle again started to speak but was cut off by Shultz, who startled everyone by blurting "We can't all be as dumb as you."

There was an almost audible gasp from a couple of councilmen, and Shultz's sharp retort effectively silenced Kyle.

Someone—in the tenseness of the moment no one seemed to know who—moved for adjournment, and the session ended.

Earlier, an endorsement of meter installation for a trial period was received from Pomona grange, representing 1,100 Richland county farmers. Also received was a protest from Union grange.

TEACHERS HEAR STORY OF N. E. A.

Membership Director Traces Growth of Association at Schoolmasters' Meeting.

Objectives of the National Education association and the story of its organization more than 50 years ago were outlined for the Mansfield Schoolmasters' club last night by T. D. Martin, Washington, D. C., membership director of the association, at a dinner meeting at the Madison township high school.

Tracing the growth of the N. E. A. from a small, struggling organization to its present place of influence in the national education picture, Martin said its upward trend "represents a corresponding growth in the teaching profession."

"The N. E. A. is not a group of officials at national headquarters in Washington but the teachers of this country working together on a national basis," he said.

"The association battles for the teacher and his profession and promotes the progress of public schools," Martin asserted.

He was introduced by H. J. Dotson, principal of John Simpson junior high school. Roy R. Spetka, principal of Bushnell school and president of the Schoolmasters' group, presided.

Following the dinner, three Senior high school pupils presented a program of piano, violin and vocal numbers. They were Dale Bechtel, violinist; Richard Sparks, pianist, and Robert Early, vocalist. The music program was arranged by A LeMoine Derr, vocal music supervisor at the high school.

J. C Stout, instructor at Senior high school, was program chairman for the meeting.

After the session the Mansfield teachers and coaches defeated a team from the Marion Schoolmasters' club in basketball, 41 to 28.

Delegations of teachers from the Marion and Ashland Schoolmasters' clubs and wives of the Mansfield club members were guests at the meeting.

The program will be in the adult assembly room of the church, Rev. Hayes M. Braker, pastor, said.

HEARS MEASURE ON CANVASSING

Council Gives First Reading to Bill Aimed at Halting Fraudulent Schemes.

To allow for further study, a measure aimed at halting fraudulent promotional schemes by requiring the registration of canvassers and solicitors, was given a first reading last night by city council.

The bill, designed to protect legitimate solicitors against fake promoters and to keep undesirables out of the city, provides that all solicitors or canvassers be registered at the police department for the issuance of a tax-free permit.

Councilman George Kyle asked for a first reading of the measure when several councilmen asked the difference between peddling and soliciting. The city now has a peddlers ordinance and council members were not certain if the present ordinance covered solicitors.

A communication from City Auditor Paul L. Kelley outlining the contributions which the city has been requested to make to the Ohio Unemployment Compensation commission was referred to the city solicitor.

The matter will be held in abeyance pending the outcome of litigation in Cleveland. Kelley explained that the hearing was scheduled within a few weeks and deemed it advisable to wait the outcome in order to determine the legality of the contributions.

WPA LAUNCHES FLOOD CONTROL PROJECT IN CITY

150 Will Get Jobs Dredging Ritter's Run, Building Retaining Walls.

Work was scheduled to start today on a WPA flood control project in Mansfield, with approximately 150 men due to get jobs at dredging Ritter's run and building walls along the stream opposite the armory.

The workers will be shifted to the city project from the Gray-Hagenbaugh ditch project in Jackson township where they have been employed for several weeks.

Put More on Job Later.

More men will be placed on the Mansfield project later after ditch jobs in rural sections of the county are completed, County Engineer Howard C. Sword said.

The flood prevention work here, which will include dredging of Ritter's run and Touby's run and construction of retaining walls at danger points along the streams in the city limits, is a part of a $131,000 county-wide WPA program.

Sponsor's funds to get the project started in the city will be provided by the county, city and Mansfield Conservancy district. Federal funds will finance the major part of the project, and the county road department will furnish most of the equipment to be used in the dredging.

Honor Galion Girl At Shower Party

A Mansfield home was the scene last night of a pre-nuptial party in honor of a Galion bride-elect when Mrs. Charles Posa, 16 South Foster street, and Miss Mary Lou Frasher entertained for Miss Clarice Kanable. Miss Kanable, daughter of Mrs. Ella Kanable, Galion, and Bernard Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rose, Galion, will be married tomorrow in Cleveland.

Chinese checkers were played during the evening, and prizes were presented to the honoree and to Miss Evelyn Herpich. Mrs. Josephine Rosandic, Galion, was the only out-of-town guest.

In addition to a shower of miscellaneous gifts the hostesses presented the bride-to-be with an electrical gift. A two-course luncheon was served to the guests at tables decorated in a color scheme of pink and white at the close of the social evening.

Hobby Display Presented By Travelers Members

"From Coins to Corner Cupboards" was the subject of the day when 14 members of the Travelers club met yesterday morning at the Women's Club. Mrs. E. J. Gilbert was hostess for the meeting, at which members displayed their hobbies and handicrafts. Old china, etchings, crayon sketches, quilts, dolls and tiny heads carved from walnuts were some of the things exhibited.

The group had luncheon at one long table, which was centered with a bowl of spring flowers. The club is planning a joint meeting with the Victorian and Round Table clubs on Feb. 21, when Mrs. E. R. Hartman will serve as hostess from the Travelers club.

Sorority Plans Future Affairs At Business Meet

Members of the Chi Sigma sorority will have a full schedule of events according to their calendar for the next month. Miss Florence Nail, president of the organization, conducted the business meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel last evening, when further plans for the St. Patrick dance were discussed.

The sorority is also planning a dessert-bridge in honor of Mrs. Dorothy Walker, national vice president of the group, tomorrow evening. Next Tuesday evening there will be a Valentine dinner for mothers and daughters at Women's Club, and the organization will sponsor a bake sale in the near future.

The St. Patrick benefit dance will be held in the ballroom at the Mansfield-Leland hotel on March 18. Miss Nail appointed the following committees in charge of arrangements for the dance: Miss Mary Lou Hout, place; Misses Margaret McFadden and Naomi Stutz, tickets; Miss Wilma Snider, orchestra; Misses Eleanor Clingan and Sarabell Kramer and Mrs. John Courtney, program and favors; Miss Mary Butler, Mrs. Arthur Knight, and Mrs. C. E. Hunter, publicity.

Miss Naomi Stutz was chosen to accompany Mrs. Walker to the Delta province convention in St. Louis, Mo. this week-end. Miss Stutz will take the place of Mrs. Knight, who is unable to attend the convention. Mrs. Knight, the Misses Grace Ladd, Vivian Miller, Margaret McFadden, Sarabell Kramer, and Mrs. Eugene Linham are in charge of arrangements for the party in the Chinese room at the Leland hotel tomorrow evening.

Miss Mary Strater is in charge of the bake sale, the date and place of which will be announced in the near future.

A BUFFET table spread with a variety of supper dishes was arranged last night before members of Alpha Pi Sigma sorority when they met in the Mansfield-Leland hotel for their annual pal party. The Misses Isabel Gerstmeyer and Ann Hagar received the girls.

Gifts were exchanged by the pals, and new pals for the year were drawn. Bridge was then played and prizes were presented to the Misses Grace Crotty and Mary Fiegenbaum.

During the business meeting arrangements were made to entertain members of the Galion and Shelby chapters of the sorority at a luncheon-bridge to be held in the Chinese rooms of the Mansfield Leland hotel promptly at 8 p. m. Feb. 21. Miss Marie Kalbfleisch and Mrs. Don Hattman will be the hostesses for the social function.

Plans for the sorority's annual dance, which will be held sometime in April, were briefly discussed, but no definite arrangements were announced by the organization.

Informally Speaking...

By MARIANNE

IT SEEMS that all of the Mansfield students who go away to school make a name for themselves sooner or later. Ernestine Baumgardner, who's a junior at Kent State college this year, was presented with a cardinal key at the school . . . which is quite an honor, indeed. The cardinal key is an honor organization at the college and there are 14 student members who have been chosen on the basis of their service to the school. Ernestine is also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, another honorary society at Kent State.

Paul Frederick Smith is attending the University of Chicago on a two-year honor scholarship—he's a freshman this year and recently pledged Alpha Delta Phi (social fraternity). Besides his scholastic activities, Paul goes in for swimming and water polo.

JANE KELLY (who's a junior at Marygrove college in Detroit, Mich.) finds time to sandwich social activities in with her studies. . . . She recently served as chairman of one of the committees for the annual junior "at-home" dance—which the junior girls sponsor in honor of the freshmen.

Naomi Grandon and Mary Bishop have found themselves to be especially busy during this past week. . . . They're in charge of arrangements for the Beta Epsilon dance at the Grotto hall this Friday evening. . . . Beta Epsilon is a club at the Y. W. C. A., you know, but this dance will be open to all. . . . It's formal, and Nels Blocker is furnishing the music for dancing.

In the mail the other day was a plaintive sort of letter from Marcia Leigh (which may or may not be a nom de plume). At any rate, Marcia seemed no little annoyed at the number of Mansfielders who are "getting away from it all" either in Florida, California or where have you, as related here. With her mind apparently on those lucky folks, Marcia points out that she skids to work at 8 a. m., has a pallor (which she drably describes as resembling a sooty field of snow) instead of a suntan and a rotten temper, even going so far as to bawl out a policeman for giving out traffic tags. I guess we can all feel for Marcia . . . because none of us is much different than she. . . . We skid to work—also with a pallor instead of a suntan (and, confidentially, have a little temper trouble now and then) but we haven't yet gotten around to bawling out the John Laws. . . . You never know though, we might!

I'M SURE you remember the William J Wooldridges who moved from Mansfield to Pittsburgh several years ago. . . . They've been grandparents five times now (and within about three years at that!) Ruth, the petite blond and youngest daughter, and her husband, Phil Bright, are the proud parents of a baby born on Jan. 26. The Brights live in Baltimore, Md., and have a year-old daughter, Ruth Ann, too. . . . Mary, who was married to Dick Lersch shortly after their graduation from high school here in 1934, is living in Louisville, Ky. . . . She and Dick have a son, Billy, who is three years old, and a daughter Jean Ann, who has just turned the one year mark. Libby is the only one of the Wooldridge girls who still resides in Mansfield . . . She and her husband Ralph Kyle, have a six-month-old daughter whose name is Elizabeth Louise—or Betty Lou if you prefer.

Lots of Mansfield folks will be living down in Charleston, W. Va., pretty soon. . . . First it was Mary Lou (Kaufman) and Ivan Bettiker who moved down. . . . And the end of the month will find two more Mansfielders . . . Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Smith (she's one of the Piper twins—Margaret, you remember) taking up residence there.

FROM MY NOTEBOOK This is the season when most hostesses like to find new ways of perking up their parties. Mrs. Ralph Kornody had some rather unusual place cards for a dinner meeting of her birthday club the other day—they were in keeping with St. Valentine day . . . The cards bore a musical staff and notes—which when read through were "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" . . . and the guests sang the song before sitting down to dinner . . . Ruth (Mrs. John) McLean brought springtime to a bridge party recently when the refreshments were blooming geraniums! Ruth used small, gaily painted flower pots which she filled with mounds of chocolate ice cream and chocolate sauce . . . Then she stuck a straw down through the middle—which held a bright red geranium bloom . . . making a colorful and different table indeed!

PLAN PARTY.

Plans for a hard time party and poke lunch to be held Feb 21 were made by members of the Delano auxiliary last night in the club rooms on Bowman street. A buffet luncheon was served by the entertainment committee after the meeting.
